

FISCAL IMPACT ANALYSIS OF MIAMI-DADE’S POLICY ON “IMMIGRATION DETAINERS”

SUMMARY

Miami-Dade’s policy of honoring immigration detainees has a substantial fiscal impact on County. Consistent with anecdotal reports from the Miami-Dade defense bar, empirical research conducted in four other local jurisdictions has shown that honoring detainees disincentivizes the posting of bond of individuals subject to detainees, resulting in such individuals spending between double and triple the amount of time in jail than they would absent a detainee. The extended jail time appears to be primarily caused by a refusal to post bond on the part of individuals in criminal custody to prevent their transfer to immigration detention.

Primarily as a result of these incentive effects, the annual fiscal impact of honoring immigration detainees in Miami-Dade County is estimated to be approximately $12.5 million.

OVERVIEW OF IMMIGRATION DETAINERS AND THEIR FISCAL IMPACT

On July 15, 2013, County Attorney Robert A. Cuevas, Jr. issued a legal opinion directed to Mayor Carlos A. Gimenez concerning the legal status of immigration detainees issued by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 287.7 in Miami-Dade County.<sup>1</sup> The opinion concluded “that compliance with ICE detainee requests is voluntary and not mandated by federal law or regulations.” See Exhibit 1.

As explained more fully in Attorney Cuevas's legal opinion, immigration detainers are requests issued by Immigration and Customs Enforcement to state and local corrections departments (including Miami-Dade County) to hold in-custody individuals for up to 48 hours, plus holidays and weekends, beyond the time they would otherwise be released from County custody.<sup>2</sup> The stated purpose of the hold is to provide ICE additional time to assume custody of the detainer's subject, generally to place him or her in civil immigration deportation proceedings. However, the decision of whether or not to honor a detainer falls on the jurisdiction receiving the detainer request. Furthermore, Attorney Cuevas' opinion notes that "[i]n the event that MDCR decides to hold a detainee for up to 48 hours pursuant to one of these detainer requests, the regulations do not mandate federal fiscal responsibility for such detainer." Hence, the fiscal burden of acceding to immigration detainers falls on the County.

The fiscal impact to Miami-Dade County of honoring immigration detainers derives from multiple sources: The direct cost of Miami-Dade's policy is the expense of housing inmates for the period of additional detention authorized by the detainer regulation, which can range from a few hours to up to five or six days.<sup>3</sup>

In addition to the direct costs, a policy of honoring detainers leads the County to incur indirect costs. These costs derive from the incentive effect the County's compliance with immigration detainers creates for detainer subjects and their criminal attorneys. MDCR Director Timothy Ryan reported in a memorandum dated February 28, 2013, that the Miami-Dade "Defense Bar is advising these inmates [subject to an immigration detainer] to 'not post bail' as if they do, they will be picked up by ICE..." Under MDCR's current policy of honoring detainers, the posting of bond by an individual for whom a detainer has been issued ends the ground for

<sup>2</sup> Examples of when the grounds for criminal custody may end include when an individual posts bond, the County declines to prosecute the charges, a judge dismisses the case, or an individual completes his or her criminal sentence.

the County's continued criminal custody and allows ICE to assume custody of the individual and begin immigration proceedings. When ICE issues an immigration detainer for an MDCR inmate, that inmate may decline to post bond when absent the detainer, he or she otherwise would have posted bond. Where the presence of an ICE detainer leads the inmate not to post bond, the inmate remains in MDCR's custody and the County must pay for the housing costs for the period in which the inmate remains in detention when he or she would have otherwise posted bond and been released.

This analysis provides an estimate of the yearly fiscal impact of Miami-Dade County's current policy of honoring immigration detainees.<sup>4</sup> It does so using both data from MDCR, as well as data contained in reports published in other jurisdictions that have attempted to estimate the effect of ICE detainees in their respective jurisdictions.

Fiscal Impact Calculation

Data

To determine the fiscal impact of the County's policy of honoring all ICE detainees, data was obtained from various sources, including sources specific to Miami-Dade County, as well as information contained in published reports on the impact of ICE detainees in four jurisdictions across the country where similar detainer cost analyses have been attempted.

The Miami-Dade-specific data includes a list provided by MDCR of all individuals against whom an immigration detainer request was submitted by ICE between December 1st 2011 and

<sup>4</sup> Additional indirect costs of honoring detainees include the loss of court fees/costs where ICE assumes physical custody of the inmate and the inmate is thus prevented from paying the fees/costs assessed. They also include the costs of defending the County in litigation resulting from inadvertent over-detention beyond the 48-hours, and/or where the County prolongs the detention of a U.S. citizen inmate against whom ICE erroneously issues a detainer. Estimating these indirect costs, however, is beyond the scope of this fiscal impact analysis.

May 21st 2013.<sup>5</sup> The list includes 3,848 individuals for this period, or 2,616 individuals annually. Additionally, The Miami-Dade proposed Budget for 2013-2014 was also used to provide the projected “average length of stay per inmate (in calendar days)” for the 2012-2013 fiscal year (21.9 days) and for the average monthly bookings (7,058 bookings).<sup>6</sup>

In estimating the fiscal impact of detainers to the County, Miami-Dade-specific data was used in conjunction with the findings of four reports from four other jurisdictions which analyze the additional detention caused by a policy of honoring immigration detainers.<sup>7</sup> Each report provides empirical data on the average period of detention for individuals subject to ICE detainers and the average period of detention for those who are not. The effect on the length of inmates’ jail stays caused by ICE detainers was extracted from these reports.

Methodology

As the reports from other jurisdictions noted in their analyses, those who were issued an ICE detainer spent a significantly longer time in jail than those who were not.<sup>8</sup> The increase in the total number of additional days of detention caused by compliance with ICE detainers ranges from 20-73. See Figure 1.

<sup>8</sup> The reports from other jurisdictions point to the incentive effects on posting bail to account for the increase in average jail time for those subject to ICE detainers. This analysis is consistent with the reports from the Miami-Dade criminal defense bar discussed in the Overview of Immigration Detainers and Their Fiscal Impact section in this report (above). See for example Exhibit 4, at pg. 2 (Report for Travis Count, TX) (“[P]eople who are subject to an ICE detainer

From this data from each jurisdiction, the total “detention multiplier” for those subject to an ICE detainer was calculated by dividing the average number of days spent in detention for individuals subject to an ICE detainer by the average number of days spent in detention by individuals not subject to a detainer for individuals. Calculation and use of this “detention multiplier” (as opposed to merely the absolute difference in number of days spent) facilitates a more accurate cross-comparison of the effects of detainers across various jurisdictions by controlling for the differences in overall average jail time, which varies considerably from jurisdiction to jurisdiction.

	Average Jail Time with No ICE Detainer	Average Jail Time with ICE Detainer	Additional Detention (In days) for those subject to an ICE detainer	“Detention multiplier”
King County, WA	17.1	46.3	29.2	2.71
New York City	59.4	134.3	74.9	2.26
Los Angeles	11.7	32.3	20.6	2.76
Travis County, TX	21.7	64.6	42.9	2.98
Average	27.5	69.4	41.9	2.68

In each of the jurisdictions considered, the data was relatively consistent: it reflects that the detention period for individuals who are issued an ICE detainer is between double and triple that of individuals not issued detainers. Thus, the “detention multiplier” ranged from 2.26 days on the low end (New York City) to 2.98 days on the high end (Travis County, TX). Across the jurisdictions, the average “detention multiplier” is 2.68. See Figure 1 above. On average across the jurisdictions, a person with an ICE detainer spends 2.68 days in jail for every one day spent in jail by a person not subject to an ICE detainer.

Fiscal Impact of ICE Detainer Compliance in Miami-Dade County

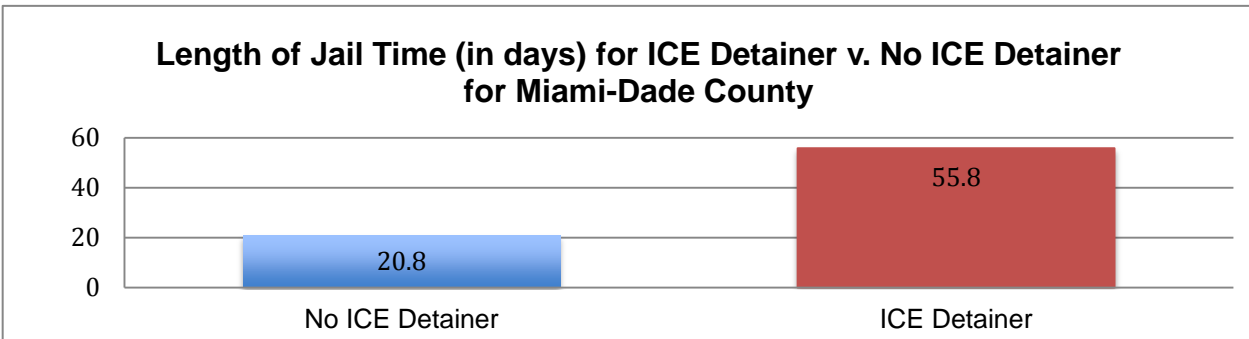

In 2012-2013 fiscal year, the average jail stay in Miami-Dade County is projected to be 21.9 days.<sup>10</sup> This figure includes both individuals subject to immigration detainers and those who are not. Using MDCR-specific data and the detainer multiplier calculated above, this overall average period of detention can be separated into the average projected jail stay for individuals issued an immigration detainer and those who are not.<sup>11</sup> On average, individuals who are not subject to an ICE detainer are projected to spend 20.8 days in jail, while individuals subject to an ICE detainer are likely to spend on average 55.8 days in jail, or an additional 35 days in jail relative to those who are not issued ICE detainers. See Figure 2 below.

<sup>11</sup> In order to separate the average projected jail stay in Miami-Dade County of 21.9 days into the average projected jail stay for those subject to ICE detainers, and those not subject to ICE detainers, the following data and calculations are used: MDCR books 84,696 people annually. Of those, approximately 2,616 are issued an ICE detainer. Thus, 3.089% of total annual bookings result in the issuance of an ICE detainer, while 96.911% do not. Thus, if  $X$  = average number of days for a person subject to an ICE hold, and  $Y$  = average number of days for a person not subject to an ICE hold, then:  $.03089(X) + .96911(Y) = 21.9$ . Since the average detention multiplier is 2.68, then  $(X) \div (Y) = 2.68$ . Solving the pair of equations, the following results are obtained:  $X=20.8$ , and  $Y=55.8$ . Thus, the average projected jail time in Miami-Dade County for individuals not subject to an ICE detainer is 20.8 days, and the average projected jail time for an individual subject to an ICE detainer is 55.8 days.

Annually, 2,616<sup>12</sup> individuals in Miami Dade are subject to ICE holds. Multiplying the estimated number of additional days individuals subject to detainers spend in jail in Miami-Dade County by the total number of individuals issued detainers per year yields the total projected additional days of detention per year which result from immigration detainers for the 2012-2013 fiscal year:

2,616 (number of people subject to a detainer per year) * 35 (increase in number of days of jail time per person) = 91,560 additional days of detention per year.

Assuming an average cost of $140/day for detention per individual per day, the total fiscal impact of honoring immigration detainers is calculated as follows:

91,560 (days of detention per year caused by honoring immigration detainers) * $140/day = $12,818,400 per year.

CONCLUSION

Reports from other jurisdictions across the country reflect that a policy of honoring immigration detainers disincentivizes the posting of bond, causing the subjects of detainers to spend significantly more time in jail than they would absent the detainer. Applying the empirical “detention multipliers” from these jurisdictions to data available for Miami-Dade County, it appears that the County’s policy of honoring immigration detainers yields an annual fiscal impact to the County of approximately $12.5 million.

Subject: Immigration and Customs Enforcement Detainer Policy and Miami-Dade Corrections and Rehabilitation Department

You have asked about immigration detainer requests issued by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”) to the Miami-Dade Corrections and Rehabilitation Department (“MDCR”). Specifically you ask what is “the legal requirement for MDCR to hold inmates, whose charges have been resolved, with an ICE immigration detainer for up to 48 hours.” The current policy of MDCR is to hold in-custody inmates who have an immigration detainer placed by ICE. As explained below, it is my conclusion that compliance with ICE detainer requests is voluntary and not mandated by federal law or regulations.

ANALYSIS

ICE immigration detainer requests are issued pursuant to 8 CFR § 287.7. An immigration detainer pursuant to Section 287.7(d) is a “mechanism by which federal immigration authorities may request that another law enforcement agency temporarily detain an alien “in order to permit assumption of custody by the Department [of Homeland Security].” United States v. Uribe-Rios, 558 F.3d 347,359 fn. 1 (4th Cir. 2009) (citing 8 C.F.R. § 287.7(d)) (emphasis added). This detainer, or “hold request” is no more than a request from the Department of Homeland Security that a detainee be held for up to 48 hours. See Buquer v. City of Indianapolis, 2013 WL 1332158 at 3, (S.D. Indiana 2013) (“ICE may issue a detainer requesting that the law enforcement agency hold the individual for up to 48 hours beyond the time that the detainee would otherwise be released in order to allow ICE to assume custody, if it chooses to do so.”) (emphasis added); See also, Euroza v. Salt Lake County, 2013 WL 653968 at 1 (C. D. Utah 2013) (finding that Form I-247 is a hold request that a detained continue to be detained pending an investigation.)

The text of Section 287.7(d) supports this conclusion since it is titled “Temporary detention at department request.” (emphasis added). 8 CFR § 287.7(d). In addition, the form used by the Department, DHS Form I-247, titled “Immigration Detainer- Notice of Action” contains a section where the Department can “check off” a box “requesting” that a certain agency maintain custody over a subject for a period not to exceed 48 hours. (A copy of Form I-247 is attached hereto).

Furthermore, when asked the question “[i]s it ICE’s position that localities are required to hold individuals pursuant to Form I-247 or are detainers merely requests with which a county could legally decline to comply?”, David Venturella, the Assistant Director of ICE, responded that “ICE views an immigration detainer as a request....” (see letter attached from David Venturella, Assistant Director of ICE).

CONCLUSION

Consistent with the plain meaning of the word “request” and based on the analysis above, including the interpretation of ICE officials themselves, an immigration detainer pursuant to 8 CFR § 287.7 is merely a request to a local law enforcement agency to notify ICE prior to the release of a certain detainee as well as a request that the law enforcement agency maintain custody of that detainee for a period not to exceed 48 hours to allow ICE to take the detainee into custody. MDCR is not obligated to comply with such a request. It may, however, choose to comply with the request as a matter of policy. In the event, that MDCR decides to hold a detainee for up to 48 hours pursuant to one of these detainer requests the regulations do not mandate federal fiscal responsibility for such detainer.

Subject: Immigration (ICE) Detainer Policy (re: MDCR Policy and Practice)

It is the current practice of the Miami-Dade Corrections and Rehabilitation Department (MDCR) to hold in-custody inmates who have an immigration detainer placed by US Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE). This means that whenever an inmate's local charges have been resolved (i.e., bails, released in court, etc.), MDCR notifies ICE that the inmate must be picked up no later than 48 hours, excluding weekends. If the inmate is not picked by ICE within the stipulated time frame, the inmate is released.

During a recent meeting with the Public Defender's Office, it has now come to our attention, due to a reinterpretation of the law, that the immigration detainer may not be a legal mandate but rather simply a request from ICE. Attached, for your convenience, is information provided during this meeting. Therefore, a legal opinion is requested as to the legal requirement for MDCR to hold inmates, whose charges have been resolved, with an ICE immigration detainer for up to 48 hours.

§ 287.7 Detainer provisions under section 287(d)(3) of the Act.

(a) Detainers in general. Detainers are issued pursuant to sections 236 and 287 of the Act and this chapter 1. Any authorized immigration officer may at any time issue a Form I-247, Immigration Detainer-Notice of Action, to any other Federal, State, or local law enforcement agency. A detainer serves to advise another law enforcement agency that the Department seeks custody of an alien presently in the custody of that agency, for the purpose of arresting and removing the alien. The detainer is a request that such agency advise the Department, prior to release of the alien, in order for the Department to arrange to assume custody, in situations when gaining immediate physical custody is either impracticable or impossible.

(b) Authority to issue detainers. The following officers are authorized to issue detainers:

- (1) Border patrol agents, including aircraft pilots;
- (2) Special agents;
- (3) Deportation officers;
- (4) Immigration inspectors;
- (5) Adjudications officers;
- (6) Immigration enforcement agents;
- (7) Supervisory and managerial personnel who are responsible for supervising the activities of those officers listed in this paragraph; and
- (8) Immigration officers who need the authority to issue detainers under section 287(d)(3) of the Act in order to effectively accomplish their individual missions and who are designated individually or as a class, by the Commissioner of CBP, the Assistant Secretary for ICE, or the Director of the BCIS.

(c) Availability of records. In order for the Department to accurately determine the propriety of issuing a detainer, serving a notice to appear, or taking custody of an alien in accordance with this section, the criminal justice agency requesting such action or informing the Department of a conviction or act that renders an alien inadmissible or removable under any provision of law shall provide the Department with all documentary records and information available from the agency that reasonably relates to the alien's status in the United States, or that may have an impact on conditions of release.

(d) Temporary detention at Department request. Upon a determination by the Department to issue a detainer for an alien not otherwise detained by a criminal justice agency, such agency shall maintain custody of the alien for a period not to exceed 48 hours, excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays in order to permit assumption of custody by the Department.

(e) Financial responsibility for detention. No detainer issued as a result of a determination made under this chapter 1 shall incur any fiscal obligation on the part of the Department, until actual assumption of custody by the Department, except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section.

[68 FR 35279, June 13, 2003]

§ 287.8 Standards for enforcement activities.

The following standards for enforcement activities contained in this section must be adhered to by every immigration officer involved in enforcement activities. Any violation of this section shall be reported to the Office of the Inspector General or such other entity as may be provided for in 8 CFR 287.10.

(a) Use of force—(1) Non-deadly force.

(i) Non-deadly force is any use of force other than that which is considered deadly force as defined in paragraph (a)(2) of this section.

(ii) Non-deadly force may be used only when a designated immigration officer, as listed in paragraph (a)(1)(iv) of this section, has reasonable grounds to believe that such force is necessary.

(iii) A designated immigration officer shall always use the minimum non-deadly force necessary to accomplish the officer's mission and shall escalate to a higher level of non-deadly force only when such higher level of force is warranted by the actions, apparent intentions, and apparent capabilities of the suspect, prisoner, or assailant.

Dear Mr. Márquez:

Thank you for your August 16, 2010, letter regarding U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement's (ICE) Secure Communities initiative. I appreciate the opportunity to discuss ICE's immigration enforcement policies with you and to respond to your questions.

As an overview, Secure Communities is ICE's comprehensive strategy to improve and modernize the identification and removal of criminal aliens from the United States. As part of the strategy, ICE uses a federal biometric information sharing capability to more quickly and accurately identify aliens when they are booked into local law enforcement custody. ICE uses a risk-based approach that prioritizes immigration enforcement actions against criminal aliens based on the severity of their crimes, focusing first on criminal aliens convicted of serious crimes like murder, rape, drug trafficking, national security crimes, and other "aggravated felonies," as defined in § 101(a)(43) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). Under this strategy, ICE maintains the authority to enforce immigration law. The activation of biometric information-sharing capability in new jurisdictions enables ICE to identify criminal aliens before they are released from law enforcement custody into our communities, which strengthens public safety. ICE works with state identification bureaus to develop deployment plans for activating the biometric information sharing capability in their jurisdictions. Your specific questions about Secure Communities are answered below.

1. Is there a mechanism by which localities can opt out?

As part of the Secure Communities activation process, ICE conducts outreach to local jurisdictions, which includes providing information about the biometric information sharing capability, explaining the benefits of this capability, explaining when the jurisdiction is scheduled for activation, and addressing any concerns the jurisdiction may have. If a jurisdiction does not wish to activate on the scheduled date in the Secure Communities deployment plan, it must formally notify its state identification bureau and ICE in writing by email, letter, or facsimile. Upon receipt of that information, ICE will request a meeting with federal partners, the jurisdiction, and the state to discuss any issues and come to a resolution, which may include adjusting the jurisdiction's activation date or removing the jurisdiction from the deployment plan.

- a) Can you provide information on the Statement of Intent referenced in the cover letter accompanying the 2009 MOA?

ICE does not require local jurisdictions to sign Statements of Intent or any other document to participate in Secure Communities. The reference to the Statement of Intent in the cover letter to the MOA was an oversight. The MOA signed by the state of California makes no mention of a Statement of Intent, and ICE has advised the California Department of Justice that it will not be utilizing Statements of Intent.

- b) Do you view the State of California as having the ability to exempt certain counties from the program under the 2009 MOA signed by ICE and the California Department of Justice?

ICE recognizes the California Department of Justice as the agency having the responsibility for the management and administration of the state's criminal data repositories, which includes development of and adherence to policies and procedures that govern their use and how information is shared with other state and federal agencies. Therefore, ICE defers to the California State Attorney General on how state, county, and local law enforcement agencies within the state of California will share biometric data under the MOA.

- c) Have you allowed other localities of law enforcement agencies, either inside or outside California, to opt out or modify their participation in the program?

The Washington, D.C. Metropolitan Police Department is the only jurisdiction to date that has terminated its signed Memorandum of Agreement. As referenced by your letter, activated jurisdictions do not have to receive the "match responses" and Secure Communities, in coordination with the state identification bureaus and the FBI's Criminal Justice Information Services (CJIS) Division, has accommodated jurisdictions that requested not to receive that information.

- d) What is the purpose of receiving the "match messages"? Do they require or authorize counties to take action with respect to arrested individuals?

The purpose of local law enforcement receiving a 'match message' is to provide any additional identity information about the subject, including aliases, from the DHS biometric database storing over 100 million records that may not have been available based only on a criminal history check. Additional identity information may further a law enforcement officer's open investigations and lead to improved officer safety. Receiving a 'match message' does not authorize or require any action by local law enforcement.

2. Once Secure Communities is deployed in a locality, is the locality required to comply with detainers, and will you provide reimbursement and identification?

a) Is it ICE's position that localities are required to hold individuals pursuant to Form I-247 or are detainers merely requests with which a county could legally decline to comply?

ICE views an immigration detainer as a request that a law enforcement agency maintain custody of an alien who may otherwise be released for up to 48 hours (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays). This provides ICE time to assume custody of the alien.

b) Who bears the costs related to detaining individuals at ICE's request?

Pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 287.7(e), ICE is not responsible for incarceration costs of any individual against whom a detainer is lodged until "actual assumption of custody." The exception provided in section 287.7(e) stating that ICE shall not incur "fiscal obligation...except as provided in paragraph (d) of this section" only serves to authorize payment but does not require it. To the extent a payment is considered, it should only be made pursuant to a written agreement because, under INA § 103(a)(1), ICE pays detention costs when aliens are in its custody pursuant to "an agreement with a State or political subdivision of a State."

c) Will ICE reimburse localities for the cost of detaining individuals pursuant to Form I-247 beyond their scheduled release times? Will ICE indemnify localities for any liability incurred because of that detention?

ICE does not reimburse localities for detaining any individual until ICE has assumed actual custody of the individual. Further, ICE will not indemnify localities for any liability incurred because the Anti-Deficiency Act prohibits such indemnity agreements by federal agencies.

3. Is it ICE's position that localities where Secure Communities is deployed are legally required to:

i. Inform ICE if a subject is to be transferred or released thirty days in advance of any release or transfer? If so, what is the legal basis for such a requirement?

The notification to ICE of inmate transfer or release within thirty days is pursuant to ICE's request for that information. It is not a statutory requirement.

Mr. Miguel Márquez

- ii. Allow ICE agents and officers access to detainees to conduct interviews and serve documents? If so, what is the legal basis for such a requirement?

INA § 238, 8 U.S.C. 1228, provides for the availability of special removal proceedings at federal, state, and local correctional facilities for aliens convicted of certain criminal offenses. Such programs require ICE officers to conduct inmate interviews to determine alienage and any possibilities for relief or protection from removal. The statute does not require state or local jurisdictions to participate in such programs.

- iii. Assist ICE in acquiring information about detainees? If so, what is the legal basis for such a requirement?

Assisting ICE in acquiring detainee information is not a legal requirement.

Thank you again for your letter. If you have any additional questions, please feel free to contact me at (202) 732-3900.

Sincerely yours,

David Venturella
Assistant Director

IMMIGRATION DETAINER REQUESTS IN KING COUNTY, WASHINGTON

Costs and Consequences

This report was commissioned by the Northwest Defenders Association. Special thanks to Mike West, Project/Program Manager in the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, for providing the dataset and answering our questions about its construction. Thanks also to Lucie Bernheim and Eileen Farley for their assistance in compiling criminal history information.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

In recent years, the federal government has expanded local involvement in the enforcement of immigration laws. As a result, an increasing number of suspected immigration law violators are detained in local jails at the request of the Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency. This report analyzes data provided by King County to assess how ICE detainer requests impact jail stays, and what this costs local governments. The data include all inmates released from a King County jail in 2011 who were either charged with a crime or released from jail after prosecutors did not file charges. The findings indicate that ICE detainer requests significantly extend jail stays, do not primarily target serious criminals, have a pronounced impact on the county's Latino population, and consume significant government resources.

On average, people subject to ICE detainers stay in jail 29.2 days longer than others. The results of a statistical regression analysis indicate that ICE detainer requests increase people's jail stay by 161% after case characteristics are taken into account. For example, a person who would otherwise be expected to stay in jail for 30 days would, as a result of an ICE detainer request, stay in jail for a total of 78.3 days instead.

The findings also cast doubt on the contention that ICE mainly targets people with serious criminal charges and histories. Nearly two-thirds of the people flagged by ICE were not charged with a felony offense associated with their booking, and approximately one in eight were not charged with any crime at all. Moreover, only one in five people subject to ICE detainer requests and who were charged with a crime had been previously convicted of a felony in Washington State; only 18% had been convicted of a crime against a person in the state. These findings suggest that most people flagged by ICE have not been convicted of a serious crime.

The results also indicate that honoring ICE detainer requests has a pronounced impact on the county's Latino population. More than one-fourth (28.7%) of all people booked into a King County jail and identified as Hispanic were transferred upon their release, presumably to ICE. This includes people who were transferred to ICE without having been charged with a crime. The fact that more than one in four Latino people who enter jail in King County are transferred to ICE suggests that the practice of honoring ICE detainers may undermine police efforts to secure the trust and cooperation of people living in immigrant and/or Latino neighborhoods.

The county and municipalities within it are responsible for the fiscal costs associated with the extended jail stays that result from ICE detainers. We estimate that the extra jail days associated with ICE detainers cost nearly $3 million per year in jail costs alone. The results also suggest that not honoring detainer requests would save King County and local municipalities approximately $1.8 million each year in jail costs.

INTRODUCTION

Over the past decade, Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) – a division of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) – has dramatically increased its efforts to apprehend and deport noncitizens who come into contact with state and local criminal justice systems.<sup>1</sup> In practice, this involves the direct transfer of people into ICE custody immediately upon their release from jail. This transfer occurs after ICE files with the jail, and the jail then honors, an ICE immigration detainer request (commonly referred to as an ICE hold or ICE detainer).<sup>2</sup> A detainer is a request from ICE to hold otherwise releasable detainees for up to 48 hours – excluding weekends and holidays – so that ICE has the opportunity to interview and/or transfer the individual to federal immigration custody.

According to ICE, this arrangement is an efficient way of identifying criminal immigration law violators and others who pose security risks to the public.<sup>3</sup> Yet these ICE enforcement practices have engendered significant controversy, and critics have raised a number of concerns about them. First, although ICE contends that it seeks primarily to identify arrestees who have committed serious crimes,<sup>4</sup> there is evidence that many of those subject to ICE detainer requests were arrested for minor offenses, including traffic violations. Moreover, a recent national study found that only one in five people detained by ICE had ever been convicted of a crime.<sup>5</sup> Critics are also concerned that the intermingling of immigration enforcement and the criminal justice system undermines police efforts to gain trust in communities with significant immigrant populations, and may encourage the racial profiling of Latinos.<sup>6</sup> Finally, honoring ICE detainers may significantly extend jail stays beyond 48 hours, and the costs associated with any such extended stays are borne by localities. In light of these concerns, numerous local

<sup>1</sup> Since 2001, ICE has expanded or initiated a series of programs to carry out these efforts, including the Criminal Alien Program (CAP), Secure Communities, the National Fugitive Operations Program (NFOP) and the 287(g) program. From 2004-2011, funding for these programs increased from $23 million to $690 million. See Mark R. Rosenblum and William A. Kandel, "Immigration Enforcement: Programs Targeting Criminal Aliens" Congressional Research Service 2011, available at <http://www.fas.org/sgp/crs/homsec/R42057.pdf>

<sup>2</sup> In the criminal context, detainers are based on warrants approved by a judge and are issued after charges have been filed. In the immigration context, however, detainers are issued by administrative ICE officers, and these requests are not reviewed by judges. See Judith A. Greene, The Cost of Responding to Immigration Detainers in California: Preliminary Findings, August 2012. governments have elected not to honor ICE detainers or to limit the circumstances under which they do so.<sup>7</sup>

This report focuses on the impact of honoring ICE detainer requests on jail stays in King County, Washington.<sup>8</sup> Previous studies indicate that ICE detainers extend jail stays by significantly more than one or two days in other jurisdictions. For example, a 2011 study found that Los Angeles jail inmates subject to ICE detainer requests spent an average of 20.6 more days in jail than other inmates.<sup>9</sup> In Travis County, Texas, there is evidence that arrestees subject to ICE detainer requests spend, on average, three times longer (65-76 days) than others (22-26 days).<sup>10</sup> Similarly, a 2010 study found that New York City jail non-citizen inmates flagged by ICE spent 73 more days in jail, on average, than others (after controlling for race and offense level).<sup>11</sup>

ICE detainers may significantly increase the amount of time people spend in jail because defendants and court actors alike understand that people subject to ICE detainer requests will likely be transferred to ICE upon their release, and hence that pre-trial release from jail would halt the criminal process. Studies suggest that this knowledge affects defendant and court actors' decision-making processes in a number of ways. For example, people who are subject to an ICE detainer request may be less likely to post bail or obtain a bond because they understand that they would not be able to return to court, and would therefore forfeit these funds.<sup>12</sup> People subject to detainer requests may also be more likely to plead not guilty so that they can make arrangements regarding their expected deportation.

Court actors' decision-making processes may also be impacted by ICE detainer requests. For example, prosecutors may see ICE detainer requests as indicators that a defendant is a flight risk, and therefore ask that judges set comparatively high bail amounts or deny pre-trial release altogether. Similarly, it is conceivable that ICE detainers effect judicial decision-making with respect to pre-trial release.<sup>13</sup> Finally, there is evidence that some jail inmates with ICE detainer requests have been held for more than 48 additional hours while awaiting transfer to ICE in some jurisdictions.<sup>14</sup> To the extent that one or more of these factors are operative, the practice of honoring ICE detainer requests will extend jail stays by significantly more than 48 hours.

The aforementioned studies provide preliminary evidence that ICE detainers have a notable impact on jail stays, and hence impose significant costs on local governments. However, only one of these reports took into account some of the legal factors that, along with ICE detainers, may influence the amount of time arrestees spend in jail. For example, if inmates with ICE detainers also have more charges or more serious charges than other inmates, these differences may account for some or all of their extended jail stays. It is important to control for these legal factors in order to isolate the impact of ICE detainer requests on the amount of time arrestees spend in jail.

This report analyzes jail booking and release data provided by King County jail administrators to assess how ICE detainer requests impact the amount of time people spend in jail. The dataset includes all people who were released from an adult King County jail facility in 2011 and were either charged with a crime or released after prosecutors did not file charges. Our analysis compares the average jail stay for people with and without ICE detainers, and uses statistical regression techniques to isolate the unique impact of ICE detainer requests (over and above other legal factors) on the length of jail stays. We also estimate the cost to local governments of honoring ICE detainer requests, and the potential cost-savings that would accrue if they ceased to do so.

KEY FINDINGS

➤ Honoring ICE detainer requests significantly extends jail stays.

- The average jail stay for people subject to ICE detainer requests was 29.2 days longer than for people not subject to ICE detainer requests.
- Among those charged with a felony offense, ICE detainer requests added 60.8 days to the average jail stay.
- For those whose most serious charge was a misdemeanor, ICE detainer requests added more than seven days to the typical jail stay.

- Regression analyses indicate that ICE detainers significantly extend jail stays – by 161% – even after taking the number of charges, and the nature and seriousness of the most serious charge, into account.
- ICE detainers mainly target people without serious criminal charges and histories.
  - The most serious criminal charge against approximately half (50.7%) of the inmates with ICE detainer requests was a misdemeanor offense.
  - Approximately one-eighth (13%) of the people subject to ICE detainer requests were not charged with a crime prior to their transfer to ICE.<sup>15</sup>
  - Four out of five people flagged by ICE had never been convicted of a crime against a person in Washington State; a similar ratio had never been convicted of a felony in the state.
- Honoring ICE detainer requests has a pronounced impact on the county’s Latino population.
  - More than one in four (28.7%) of the people who entered jail and were identified as Hispanic were transferred to the custody of ICE upon their release.
  - Nearly all (96.2%) of the individuals flagged by ICE were transferred to its custody upon their release from jail.
- Honoring ICE detainer requests consumes significant local resources.
  - Honoring ICE detainer requests cost local governments nearly $3 million in jail costs alone in 2011.
  - Not honoring ICE detainer requests would save local governments approximately $1.8 million in jail costs each year.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>15</sup> The jail data indicate whether released individuals were subject to an ICE detainer request and whether they were released via a transfer of custody, but do not identify not the agency to which the released person was transferred. In the remainder of this report we assume that people subject to ICE detainer requests and transferred upon release were transferred to the custody of ICE.

DATA AND METHODOLOGY

Data

The original dataset provided by King County jail administrators included information about 37,670 persons booked (at least once) into a King County jail in 2011. Because we are interested in the impact of ICE detainers on the length of jail stays, we limited the sample to cases in which the booked individual was released in 2011 (and excluded one individual who died in custody). We also excluded 2,619 bookings associated with people who had pending administrative matters but no criminal charges.<sup>17</sup> Bookings with missing data (133 cases) were also dropped from the sample.

After these exclusions, our sample included 33,609 separate jail bookings associated with a 2011 jail release date. It is important to note that people may have been booked into and released from jail more than once in 2011; the data therefore do not necessarily refer to distinct individuals. The dataset includes information about a number of variables, including: reason for release, type of charge (i.e., felony/misdemeanor/no charge), number of charges, seriousness ranking of each charge, and the race, ethnicity, and gender of the booked person.

In several cases, these variables were recoded to facilitate analysis. For example, in approximately 26% of bookings, the most serious charge was not listed as the first charge. We therefore used the seriousness ranking to identify the most serious charge associated with each booking. This task was complicated by the fact that ICE detainer requests are entered into the booking system as a felony charge with a correspondingly high seriousness ranking. As a result, the ICE detainer request was initially identified as the most serious charge for some cases. However, ICE detainer requests are civil immigration issues, not felony charges. We therefore used the charge narrative to identify ICE detainer requests and recoded their seriousness ranking in order to prevent them from being identified as the most serious charge.

Some of our analyses distinguish between bookings according to the most serious charge. For approximately 8.9% of all bookings (2,979 cases), the most serious charge was an “investigation,” meaning that a formal charge had not been filed by the prosecutor’s office at the time of release. We refer to these cases as “not charged” in our analyses. This category includes people who were released from jail without having been charged with felony or a misdemeanor, and who did not have pending administrative matters such as extradition requests or community supervision violations. As a result, our analyses compare the number of days spent in jail by three distinct groups of people: those whose most serious charge was a felony; those whose most serious charge was a misdemeanor; and those who were not charged with a crime while in jail and who were not identified as having other violations, warrants or extradition requests.

<sup>17</sup> These cases mainly involved persons who were alleged to have violated the terms of their community placement, and hence whose jail stay was mainly determined by state or other extra-county agencies. Because some of these cases involve detainees with ICE detainer requests, our results likely underestimate the cost of honoring ICE detainer requests.

In the original dataset, the variable “number of charges” included investigations that did not result in formal charges and ICE detainers. We recoded the number of charges to include the number of charges to which a court cause number had been assigned. In our analyses, then, the number of charges refers to the number of criminal charges filed. The number of charges ranges from 0 to 10. The original “number of charges” variable indicated that 46 cases had more than 10 charges. Because the data provided identify only the first 10 booking allegations for each case, we use 10 charges as the maximum for these cases in the regression analysis.

Methodology

Testing for Differences between Groups. We begin by providing descriptive statistics to illuminate the prevalence and distribution of ICE detainer requests, and to compare the average (mean) and typical (median) number of days people with and without ICE detainer requests spend in jail. We also present the results of statistical tests measuring these differences. These tests allow us to assess whether the difference between the average jail stay for inmates with and without ICE detainer requests could be due to chance. Conventionally, social scientists consider the difference between two proportions to be statistically significant if there is a 5 percent or smaller probability that the observed difference is the result of chance.

Regression Analysis. We also employ Ordinary Least Squares (OLS) statistical regression techniques to measure the nature and strength of the relationship between each of several explanatory factors that could influence the number of days people spend in jail (the dependent variable). These explanatory variables include: the nature of the most serious charge (e.g., felony, misdemeanor, or no charge); the seriousness ranking of the most serious charge; and the number of charges filed. We refer to these as “legal factors” or “case characteristics.” We also analyzed the impact of extra-legal factors – namely, the race, ethnicity and gender of the person who was booked – on the number of days spent in jail.

Whereas descriptive statistics provide an empirical summary of the data, regression analysis is a statistical technique for estimating the relationships (i.e., correlations) among variables included in a given model. The model includes an outcome or dependent variable – in this case, jail days – as well as a number of factors that may affect the dependent variable. Regression analysis clarifies how the average value of the dependent variable changes when any one of the independent variables is varied and while the other independent variables are held constant. Diagnostic tools are used to help identify the most appropriate model.

In this case, diagnostic tests indicated that the variable “number of jail days” was heavily skewed and that the residuals were not normally distributed. Heavily skewed distributions are common in social science models and indicate that there is not a strictly linear relationship between an explanatory and dependent variable. In this case, for example, being charged with a felony does not increase the number of jail days by an absolute number. Rather, its impact depends upon the levels of other variables included in the model. In order to accurately model this type of relationship, we use the natural log of “number of jail days” as the dependent variable, normalizing its distribution and facilitating interpretation of individual regression coefficients. As a result, the regression coefficients are interpreted as a percent change in the number of jail days attributable to each of the independent variables.

Diagnostic tests also identified four cases as statistical outliers with both influence and leverage. This means that their values were so extreme that including them in the regression model would artificially “pull” the data in one direction. Because the objective of OLS regression analysis is to model the typical relationship among a set of variables rather than to explain the outcomes of extreme or atypical cases, we excluded these five cases from the regression analysis.

FINDINGS

ICE Detainers by Gender and Ethnicity

Over half – 52.2% – of inmates subject to ICE detainer requests, but only 3% of other inmates, were classified as Hispanic (see Figure 1). Because inmates are not asked about their ethnic identity until later in their jail stay – usually after 72 hours – some are released before providing this information. As a result, the percentage of inmates who self-identify as Hispanic or Latino may be notably larger than is reported here.<sup>18</sup> Men were also over-represented among people

<sup>18</sup> For example, in our study of Legal Financial Obligations in Washington State, we used Hispanic Surname Analysis to identify all persons with last names that are strongly associated with persons who identify themselves as Hispanic or Latino/a. We found that only 5.3% of defendants were classified in court records as Hispanic, but 10.8% had surnames that were highly likely to be associated with persons who self-identified as Hispanic/Latino in the U.S. Census survey. See Katherine Beckett, Alexis Harris and Heather Evans. 2008. The Assessment and Consequences of Legal Financial Obligations in Washington State, available at: http://www.courts.wa.gov/committee/pdf/2008LFO\_report.pdf

subject to detainer requests relative the rest of the jail population: 97% of those flagged by ICE, but 79.2% of other inmates, were male.

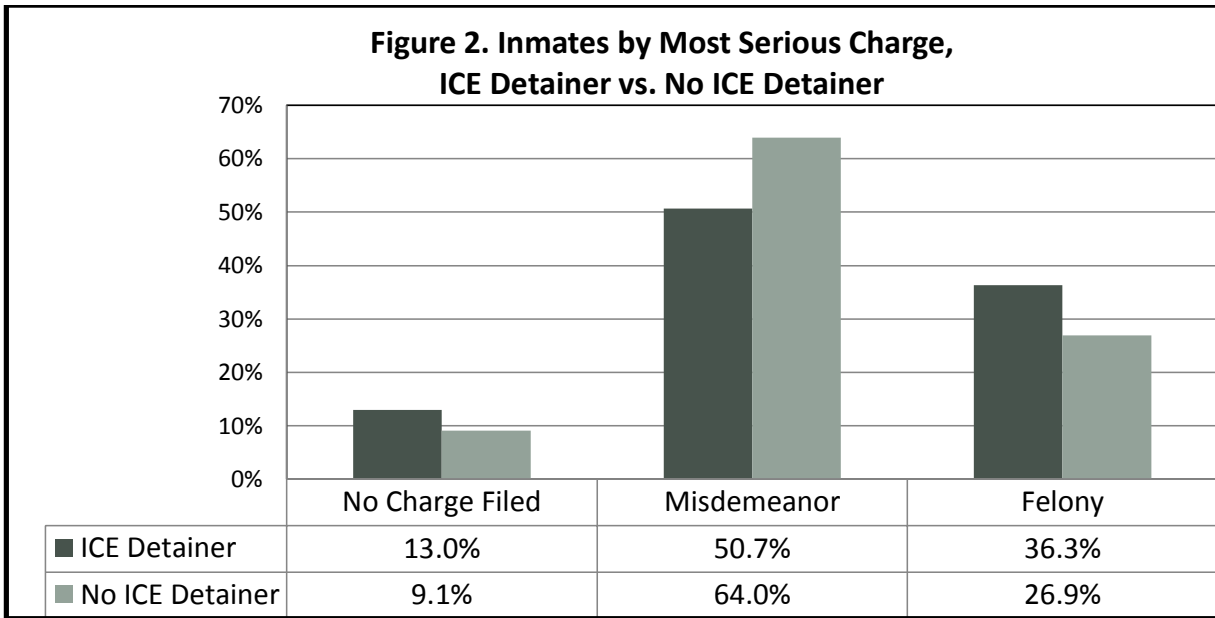

Source: Authors' analysis of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n= 33,609

Notably, over one-fourth – 29.5% – of all inmates classified by jail administrators as Hispanic and released in 2011 were flagged by ICE. Nearly all of these individuals were transferred upon release. This means that over one-fourth (28.7%) of all people booked into a King County jail who were classified by jail administrators as Hispanic were transferred, presumably to ICE, upon their release.

ICE Detainer Requests by Most Serious Charge and Criminal History

Each booking is associated with one of three charge types: felony, misdemeanor, or “not charged.” The most serious charge for over half (50.7%) of the individuals subject to ICE detainer requests was a misdemeanor, and just over one-third (36.3%) were charged with a felony. The remaining 13% were not charged with any criminal offense (see Figure 2).

Source: Authors' analysis of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n= 33,609

Although a comparatively large percentage of people with ICE detainers were charged with a felony offense, a relatively large proportion of those with ICE detainers were not charged with any crime at all. Overall, nearly two-thirds of the people subject to ICE detainer requests were not charged with a felony offense prior to their release from jail in 2011. These findings cast doubt on the contention that ICE detainers mainly identify people who have committed serious crimes and who pose serious safety risks to the community.

However, the jail data summarized in Figure 2 do not include information about prior criminal convictions. Although the results show that the majority of people flagged by ICE are not charged with a felony, it is nonetheless conceivable that people subject to ICE detainer requests have extensive criminal histories that include felony convictions or other serious crimes. In order to analyze the criminal histories of people subject to ICE detainers, and to compare them against people not flagged by ICE, we drew a random sub-sample from the larger sample. The sub-sample included 100 individuals who were released from a King County jail in 2011 and charged with a crime. We then compiled criminal history information for these individuals.<sup>19</sup>

The results of this comparison are shown in Table 1, and indicate that only 20% of the people subject to an ICE detainer request had one or more prior Washington State felony convictions (compared to 60% of people released from jail in 2011 without ICE detainer requests). Put <sup>19</sup> Criminal history information was obtained through the Washington State Administrative Office of the Courts Judicial Information Services (JIS) website. This information was compiled by Lucie Bernheim of the Northwest Defenders Association. differently, 4 of 5 people flagged by ICE had no prior Washington State felony convictions. Similarly, a comparatively small proportion of people with ICE holds had one or more prior Washington State convictions for a crime against persons (18% vs. 30% of people not subject to ICE detainer requests).<sup>20</sup> On average, people subject to ICE detainer requests also had fewer prior felonies and prior convictions for crimes against persons in Washington than those not subject to ICE detainer requests.

Source: Authors' analysis of subsample of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n= 100

These findings suggest that four of five people flagged by ICE have not been convicted of a serious crime in Washington State, and thus that ICE is not mainly targeting people with serious criminal histories. And although our analysis does not include information about convictions from other states or the federal system, our findings are nonetheless consistent with the results of a recent analysis of national ICE detainer data by the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse (TRAC), a data gathering and research organization at Syracuse University.

TRAC researchers analyzed information about nearly a million detainees issued between Fiscal Year 2008 and the start of 2012. Their results indicate that more than three-fourths (77.4%) of the individuals subject to ICE detainees had no criminal record either at the time the detainer was issued or afterward. For the remaining 22.6 percent who had a criminal record, only 8.6

<sup>20</sup> These are defined in RCW 9.94A.411. The figures regarding number of prior crimes against persons refer to the six most recent felonies and misdemeanors. The full list of these offenses is available at <https://fortress.wa.gov/wsp/watch/help/CrimesAgainstPersonsListing.pdf>

percent of the charges were classified as a Level 1 offense.<sup>21</sup> Taken together, the findings described above provide compelling evidence that ICE detainers do not mainly target people who pose serious security risks to the broader community.<sup>22</sup>

ICE Detainer Requests and Type of Release

People subject and not subject to ICE detainer requests were released in different ways. ICE issued a total of 821 ICE detainer requests for people released from a King County jail in 2011. Thirty of these were issued for people who had no criminal charges but did have other pending administrative matters, such as extradition requests or alleged Department of Corrections violations. These 30 individuals were not included in our sample. As a result, our sample included 791 people subject to ICE detainer requests. Persons subject to an ICE detainer request constituted 2.4% of our sample.

Whereas the majority of people not subject to ICE detainer requests were conditionally released from jail – and not transferred to the custody of another agency – nearly all (96.2%) of the individuals sought by ICE were transferred to ICE upon their release from jail. This indicates that the County in fact transfers people to ICE custody in nearly all instances in which detainers are issued. Put differently, pre-trial, conditional release is essentially not an option for people subject to ICE detainer requests in King County (see Figure 3). This means that alternatives to incarceration – such as electronic home monitoring, drug court and CCAP (Community Corrections Alternative Program) – are not available to people flagged by ICE.

<sup>21</sup> "Transaction Records Access Clearinghouse (TRAC) Report, "Who Are the Targets of ICE Detainers," Feb 20, 2013. Syracuse University. Available online <http://trac.syr.edu/immigration/reports/310/>

<sup>22</sup> TRAC also found that ICE issued detainer requests for 834 U.S. Citizens and 28,489 legal permanent residents. In King County, Washington, one U.S. citizen and thirty legal permanent residents were subject to ICE detainer requests. Neither the U.S. citizen nor 24 of the 30 legal permanent residents flagged by ICE had a criminal record.

Source: Authors' analysis of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n=33,609

This pattern also existed for people who left jail without having been charged with a crime. That is, the vast majority of people who were not charged and did not have ICE detainer requests were conditionally released from custody. However, nearly all of those who were not charged with a crime but had an ICE detainer request were nonetheless released to the custody of ICE. Thus, being booked into jail has uniquely serious consequences for people sought by ICE even if they are not charged with a crime.

ICE Detainers and Length of Jail Stay

The average jail stay for people subject to ICE detainer requests was significantly greater than for those who are not. Specifically, detainees without an ICE detainer request spent an average of 17.1 days in jail, while those with an ICE detainer request spent an average of 46.3 days in jail. The difference between these two averages is 29.2 days. A standard t-test (a statistical test comparing the means of two groups) indicates that this difference is statistically significant at the alpha level 0.000. This means that there is a 0.0% chance that the difference between these two groups' average jail stays is due to chance. The typical (median) jail stay for inmates with ICE detainer requests is also more than three times as long as the typical stay for inmates without an ICE detainer request (see Figure 4).<sup>23</sup>

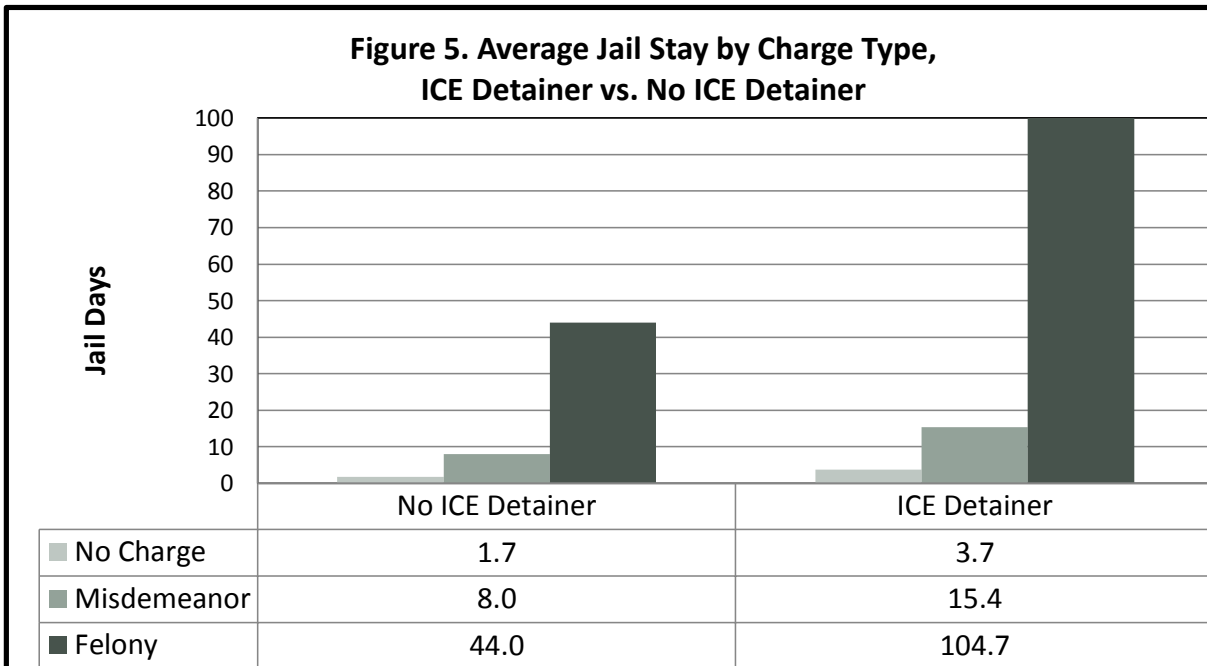

<sup>23</sup> Throughout this report, we provide both the observed median (typical) value and the observed mean (average) value when reporting descriptive statistics. The median is the value that divides the sample distribution in half, and is less sensitive to extreme values than is the average (mean). In this case, the mean (average) number of jail days is significantly greater than the median, which indicates that a number of cases with very long jail stays are influencing the mean.

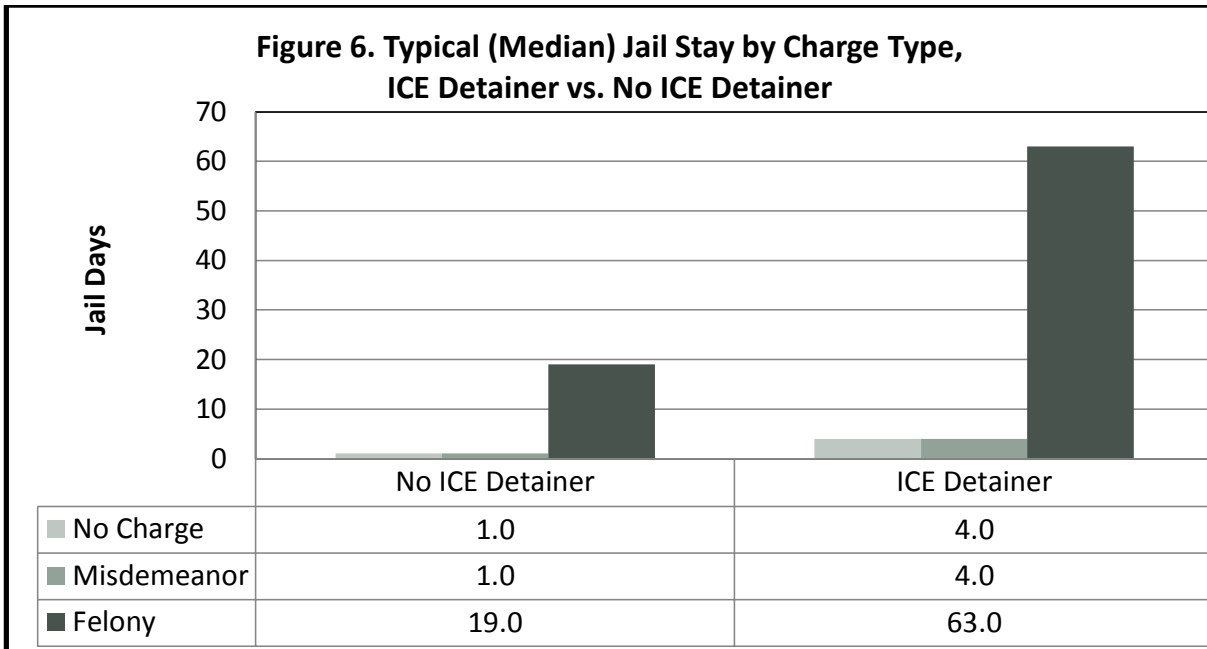

Source: Authors' analysis of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n= 33,609

Analyzing cases with ICE detainer requests by charge type suggests an even starker relationship between the number of days people spend in jail and ICE detainer requests. Below, Figure 5 shows that people with ICE detainer requests spend more days in jail across all charge types. Indeed, for inmates with ICE detainer requests whose most serious charge is a felony, the mean (average) number of days spent in jail is more than two times greater than the average number of days spent by people with felony charges but not subject to ICE detainer requests (105 vs. 44 days). For those charged with misdemeanors, the average number of jail days is nearly twice that of those without ICE detainer requests (15 vs. 8 days.) People who are not charged with a crime and have an ICE detainer request also spend twice as much time in jail as those who are not charged and do not have an ICE detainer request (4 vs. 2 days).

Source: Authors' analysis of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n= 33,609

Statistical tests of these differences indicate that they are significant at the alpha level 0.000. Again, this means that there is a 0.0% chance that the differences in length of jail stay are due to chance. Moreover, the differences persist if we compare the median number of days spent in jail for those with and without ICE detainer requests across charge type (see Figure 6).

Source: Authors' analysis of data provided by the King County Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, n= 33,609

Regression Results

The descriptive statistics presented above provide compelling evidence that ICE detainer requests significantly impact the amount of time inmates spend in jail. However, it is possible that some of these differences stem from case characteristics rather than from ICE detainer requests. For example, a comparatively large percentage of people with ICE detainer requests are charged with a felony, and persons charged with a felony spend, on average, more time in jail than others. It is therefore important to control for these and other case characteristics that may impact jail stays to isolate the unique impact of ICE detainer requests on jail stays.

The results of the regression analysis presented below capture the effect of a number of legal factors on the number of days arrestees spent in jail in King County. These factors include: ICE detainer requests; the number of charges associated with each booking; the seriousness ranking of the booked person's most serious charge; and whether the most serious charge listed is a felony, misdemeanor, or an "investigation" (i.e., no charges had been filed at the time of release). A detailed description of each variable and its measurement is included in Table A in the Appendix. Descriptive statistics (including the mean, minimum and maximum values, and standard deviations) of each variable are listed in Table B in the Appendix.

As noted previously, multivariate regression analysis differs from description in that it provides an estimated model and tests for significant relationships (i.e., correlation) among the variables included in the model. Regression results provide a measure of the direction and strength of the relationship between each potential explanatory variable and the dependent variable (in this case, the number of days spent in jail). The direction of the association (i.e., whether the coefficient has a negative or positive value) indicates whether the variable causes a decrease or increase in jail days; the strength (statistical significance) indicates how likely the correlation is due to chance.

It is important to note that the results of this analysis identify which of the explanatory variables included in the model are significantly associated with the dependent variable holding all other variables included the model constant. That is, regression analysis allows us to simultaneously take into consideration a number of factors and identify the unique impact of each variable on the outcome. If the regression results indicate that being booked on a felony charge is positively and significantly associated with number of jail days, this would mean that those booked on a felony charge spend more time in jail than those booked on a misdemeanor after taking all other variables in the model, including seriousness ranking of the most serious felony and number of other charges, into account.

Table 2 lists the legal factors that may be related to the number of days spent in jail, as well as the coefficient (or unique impact), statistical significance, and interpretation of each variable.<sup>24</sup> The regression results indicate that all the legal factors included – ICE detainer requests, the number of charges, the seriousness rank of the most serious charge, and type of most serious charge – have a statistically significant impact on the number of days spent in jail. In this case, the likelihood that these correlations are the product of chance is less than 0.1%. The results further indicate that after taking into consideration the number of charges, seriousness level and type of most serious charge, ICE detainer requests increase the length of stay in jail, on average, by 161 percent. Only the seriousness ranking of the most serious charge has a negative correlation with number of days in jail.<sup>25</sup>

<sup>24</sup> It is important to note that regression results provide a mathematical description of a complex set of relationships between variables and thus require nuanced interpretation. In this model, the coefficients should be interpreted as having a “semi-elastic” rather than linear relationship with number of days in jail.

<sup>25</sup> This means that people booked and charged with more serious crimes spend slightly less time in jail, on average, than those involving less serious charges. This negative relationship may reflect the fact that people booked on more serious charges are more likely to be transferred to prison to carry out their sentence. In fact, 65% of people booked with the most serious crimes (levels IX and above) were released from jail into another agency’s custody; just 14% leave jail on conditional release granted by the court.

The examples provided in Table 3 below illustrate the meaning of these results. Compared to a person without an ICE detainer request who was booked and spent 1, 5, 10 or 30 days in jail, an ICE detainer request would increase a similarly situated person's length of stay by 1.6, 8, 16 or 48 days, respectively, even if all other case characteristics were identical. It is important to note that these results describe the aggregate relationship between ICE detainer requests and jail days; this simple calculation cannot be applied to each individual case.

Table 3. Interpretation of Regression Results Regarding Impact of ICE Detainers

5	8.1	13.1
10	16.1	26.1
30	48.3	78.3

Table 4 below summarizes the regression results, listing the degree of statistical significance and an interpretation of the association. For detailed regression results, see Table C in the Appendix.

Table 4. OLS Regression Results: Significant Predictors of Number of Days in Jail
Legal Factor	Statistical Significance	Meaning of Correlation
Detainer Request	Very strong	Having an ICE detainer request significantly increases the number of days spent in jail (on average, an increase of 161%)
Number of Charges	Very strong	Cases with greater numbers of charges stay significantly longer in jail (on average, an increase of 75% for each additional charge)
Seriousness Rank	Very strong	Charges with higher seriousness ranking scores are correlated with significantly shorter jail stays (on average, a -3.6% decrease)
Investigation	Very strong	Having no charges filed significantly increases the time spent in jail (on average, 15.7% more time than if charged with a misdemeanor)
Felony	Very strong	Being booked on a felony charge significantly increases the time spent in jail (on average, 600% more time than if charged with a misdemeanor)

We also tested a regression model that assessed the impact of the booked person’s gender, ethnicity, and race on length of jail stays (see regression results in Table C in the Appendix). Including these controls did not dramatically change the results: both the direction and strength of all the legal factors remained consistent. Interestingly, though, this model suggests that being Latino increases the length of stay in jail above and beyond other considerations, including having an ICE detainer request. Being racially non-white and male also positively and significantly impacted the length of one’s jail stay (see Table D in the Appendix).

Although these findings raise important questions about the role of race, ethnicity and gender in the criminal process, we do not rely on the results from this model here, for two reasons. First, Latinos are likely undercounted in these data. Second, race and ethnicity were not recorded as mutually exclusive categories, meaning that some individuals are “double counted” in the analysis. For this reason, the results may disproportionately reflect the experience of some defendants. A more accurate model would require restructuring race and ethnicity as mutually exclusive categories and employing a technique such as Hispanic Surname Analysis to identify Latino defendants. Further study is needed to assess the impact of race, ethnicity and gender on length of jail stay.

The Cost of Honoring ICE Detainer Requests to Local Governments

Several studies have estimated the cost of honoring ICE detainer requests to local governments. Some of the results have been dramatic. For example, one study concluded that Los Angeles County spent $26 million in 2010 to detain inmates on behalf of ICE.<sup>26</sup> Another study estimated that the annual cost of honoring ICE detainer requests ranged from $8 million in Travis County, Texas to $49.6 million in New York City in 2008.<sup>27</sup>

While these results are striking, the methodology used in these studies may lead to an over or under-estimate of the cost of honoring ICE detainer requests, for two reasons. First, these estimates measure the number of “extra” jail days attributable to honoring ICE detainer requests by subtracting the average number of days spent in jail by people without ICE detainer requests from the average number of days spent in jail by people with ICE detainer requests. Thus, if people without ICE detainer requests spend an average of 20 days in jail, and people with ICE detainer requests spend an average of 40 days in jail, the difference between these figures – 20 days – is conceptualized and treated as the sole consequence of the ICE detainer request.

However, this assumption may be erroneous, as the difference in jail stays for people with and without ICE detainer requests may also be a function of legal factors such as the seriousness or number of charges. For this reason, it is important to also utilize a measure of the number of jail days added as a result of ICE detainer requests net of other legal factors that may influence the length of jail stays for people with ICE detainees. Below, we use regression results – which isolate the unique impact of ICE detainer requests on jail stays net of other legal factors – to identify the cost to local jurisdictions of honoring ICE detainer requests.<sup>28</sup>

In addition, prior studies have not distinguished between average cost – the cost of honoring ICE detainer requests – and the marginal cost savings that would accrue if a county were not to honor these requests. Average cost refers to the total cost of an activity (such as operating a jail) divided by the number of persons who are subject to that activity over a given period of time. Prior estimates of the cost of honoring ICE detainees have employed this measure of cost.

Although this measure is useful for estimating how much is currently spent on a given activity, average cost estimates do not illuminate how much will be saved by not engaging in that activity. For example, although it may cost a jail an average of $100 per night to house an inmate, this does not mean that removing that inmate for one night will save the county $100.

<sup>28</sup> The majority of the cost associated with extended jail stays is borne by King County. However, because municipalities reimburse the county for the cost of jailing misdemeanants, the cost of extended days for those charged with misdemeanors is borne by municipalities that rent bed space in a King County jail.

This is because some costs – such as the cost of electricity – are not affected by small reductions in the number of persons who are jailed. By contrast, marginal costs reflect the amount by which the cost of an activity would change given a one unit change in that activity.

Below, we use the regression results to estimate (a) how much it cost local governments to honor ICE detainer requests in 2011, and (b) how much they might have saved by not honoring the requests during that year (the marginal cost savings). These estimates refer only to operating costs, and do not include construction costs.

To generate these estimates, we first obtained estimates of statewide average and marginal jail costs generated by the Washington State Institute for Public Policy (WSIPP).<sup>29</sup> We then used WSIPP’s marginal cost figures to calculate the ratio of estimated marginal costs to estimated average costs. The results indicate that marginal jail costs are, on average, 63% of average jail costs in Washington State. This ratio was then applied to the average cost of a King County jail bed in 2011 to estimate the marginal cost savings associated with reducing the number of days people spent in King County jails.<sup>30</sup>

Next we used the regression coefficient associated with the variable “ICE detainer request” to calculate the number of “extra” jail days generated by honoring ICE detainees. Because the relationship between number of jail days and ICE detainer is not linear, the coefficient is interpreted as a percent change in the number of jail days attributed to ICE detainees – net of the impact of other legal factors. In this case, the coefficient (.937) is interpreted as 161% of the average jail stay for people without ICE holds (17.1 days). For comparison, we also provide the results obtained if we treat the raw difference between the observed average jail stay for people with and without ICE detainer requests as number of “extra” jail days attributable to honoring ICE detainer requests. In this case, taking case characteristics into account actually increases our estimate of the cost of honoring ICE detainer requests to King County, though this may not be true in other jurisdictions.

The results of these calculations are presented in Table 5 below. We have italicized the results obtained by using the regression coefficient to estimate the number of “extra” jail days generated by honoring ICE detainer requests because we believe this to be a superior measure, and foreground these figures in our discussion. The results suggest that honoring ICE detainer requests cost King County nearly $3 million in 2011. The results also indicate that not honoring the requests would have saved the county approximately $1.8 million.

<sup>29</sup> These can be found in Washington State Institute for Public Policy, Return on Investment: Evidence-Based Options to Improve Statewide Outcomes, April 2012 (and accompanying technical manual). The figures provided were for 2008 and 2009. We used the annual escalation rate generated by WSIPP (.022) and the U.S. inflation adjuster to convert these figures to 2011 dollars.

<sup>30</sup> The average cost bed cost for a single night in a King County jail in 2011 was $133. (Mike West, Department of Adult and Juvenile Detention, personal communication). Applying the ratio .63% ratio suggested by WSIPP, we estimate the marginal cost savings associated with a one-person reduction of the King County jail population for one day to be $83.24.

Extra Days Attributable to ICE Detainers as Measured by...	Estimated Cost of Honoring ICE Detainers (Average Cost)	Estimated Savings Associated with Not Honoring ICE Detainers (Marginal Cost)
Regression coefficient	$2,894,971	$1,811.860
Difference between average jail stay within charge category	$2,742,759	$1,713,369

These results are an estimate of the potential cost savings associated with not honoring any ICE detainer requests. However, the extent of future cost savings will depend on the degree to which any change in policy or practice reduces the Average Daily Population (ADP) in King County jails. Because people charged with felonies typically spend longer in jail than others, the effect of any policy change on the response to ICE detainer requests for people charged with a felony will be especially impactful.<sup>31</sup>

<sup>31</sup> Our marginal cost savings estimate does not take into account federal reimbursements for some of the expenses associated with the detention of some undocumented immigrants. Under the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP), localities can apply for Bureau of Justice Administration (BJA) funds to partially off-set the cost of detaining undocumented persons who spend four or more consecutive days in jail and who are convicted of a felony or a second misdemeanor. In FY 2012, King County received $724,538 in SCAAP monies from BJA (<https://www.bja.gov/Funding/12SCAAPawards.pdf>). Nevertheless, we do not include future SCAAP reimbursements in our estimate of the marginal cost savings associated with not honoring ICE detainer requests, mainly because the availability of future SCAAP funds is uncertain. The pool of SCAAP funds has diminished notably, from a high of $565 million in FY 2002 to $240 million in FY 2012. The President’s FY 2013 budget allocates only $70 million for SCAAP, and the final SCAAP budget allocation for FY 2013 is, particularly in light of sequestration, unknown (https://www.bja.gov/ProgramDetails.aspx?Program\_ID=86). For these reasons, future SCAAP reimbursements are unknowable, and it is therefore not possible to anticipate how any reduction in jail stays by undocumented persons would impact future SCAAP reimbursements. It is also worth noting that only some of the people subject to ICE detainer requests meet the SCAAP reimbursement requirements, and that the average per diem reimbursement rate for FY 2012 – $28.16 per inmate – was far less than the marginal cost figure suggested by WSIPP and used in our analysis.

CONCLUSIONS

Localities across the country are assessing how honoring ICE detainer requests affects their residents and their budgets. This report analyzes data provided by King County and uses statistical regression methods that take legal factors into account to assess how ICE detainer requests impact jail stays, and what this costs the county.

The results indicate that people with ICE detainers stay in jail significantly longer than similarly situated people who are not flagged by ICE. In fact, the regression results indicate that ICE holds increase people's jail stay by 161% – net of any differences in case characteristics.

The findings of this study also cast doubt on the contention that ICE detainer requests mainly target people with serious criminal charges and histories. Overall, nearly two-thirds of the people flagged by ICE were not charged with a felony offense, and roughly one in eight were not charged with any crime at all. Moreover, only one in five people who had been charged with a crime and were subject to an ICE detainer had been convicted of a felony crime or crime against a person in Washington State. These findings challenge the idea that ICE detainers mainly identify people who have committed serious crimes.

The results further indicate that the practice of honoring ICE detainer requests has a pronounced impact on King County's Latino population. More than one-fourth (28.7%) of all people booked into a King County jail and identified as Hispanic have ICE detainer requests and are transferred upon their release, presumably to ICE. This includes people who are released to ICE without having been charged with a crime. The fact that many of the Latino people who enter jail are ultimately transferred to ICE suggests that this practice may well undermine police efforts to secure the trust and cooperation of people living in immigrant and/or Latino neighborhoods.

Finally, it is clear that the practice of honoring detainer requests consumes significant local resources. We estimate that the "extra" jail days associated with ICE detainers cost local governments nearly $3 million per year. Our results further suggest that not honoring ICE detainer requests would save approximately $1.8 million each year in jail costs alone. These figures do not include court costs associated with jail stays.

Overall, then, the findings presented here suggest that ICE detainer requests significantly extend jail stays, do not primarily target serious criminals, have a pronounced impact on the county's Latino population, and consume significant local resources.

INTRODUCTION

In February 2008, Austin Police Department (APD) officers pulled over a car on a routine traffic stop. In the car were a Central American couple and their three-year-old U.S.-citizen son. The officers arrested Sylvia and Ernesto<sup>1</sup> due to outstanding traffic tickets, and later charged them with tampering with government records after finding the couple's false Social Security cards used to gain employment. Sylvia and Ernesto were booked into the Travis County Jail, while their son Luis<sup>1</sup> was temporarily placed into Child Protective Services (CPS), to be reunited with his parents once they were released from jail. However, this reunion was not to occur on American soil.<sup>2</sup>

Through an initiative called the Criminal Alien Program (CAP), local law enforcement agencies collaborate with Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to identify deportable<sup>3</sup> non-citizens in county jails across the county. In Austin, Texas, the seat of Travis County, the Sheriff's Office supplies ICE with a list of foreign-born arrestees and grants ICE unlimited access to the jail to interview inmates. For individuals like Sylvia and Ernesto, who are undocumented, or for legal immigrants who are still vulnerable to deportation for crimes as minor as shoplifting, an arrest can lead to deportation.<sup>4</sup>

Because ICE was able to take custody of them, Sylvia and Ernesto were not released into the community to be with their young son. Instead, they were held in ICE detention while deportation proceedings commenced against them. Meanwhile, CPS transferred Luis to foster care, as no relatives could be immediately found to claim him. Luis's parents were ultimately both deported to Central America, and Luis lingered in foster care for a week until a relative was found. Unfortunately, this is no isolated incident. In 2008, the University of Texas School of Law's Children's Rights Clinic saw another similar case,<sup>5</sup> and in April 2009, The New York Times reported that an undocumented woman's child was placed for adoption when the court deemed she "abandoned" her son after being jailed subsequent to an immigration workplace raid.<sup>6</sup>

ICE and local law enforcement officials claim that CAP targets the worst criminal offenders—those dangerous individuals who make our communities less safe. The Chief Deputy of the Travis County Sheriff's Office (TCSO) has said, "We know for a fact that we are only getting the bottom of the barrel, so to speak. These guys are really the undesirables. Most people wouldn't want them getting out of jail and being their neighbor. They'd like to see them deported out of the country."<sup>7</sup> However, stories like those of Sylvia and Ernesto, and those of many others whose families are torn apart because of traffic arrests or misdemeanor<sup>8</sup> offenses, show that many of the people impacted are far from being at “the bottom of the barrel.”

Not only are these individuals facing deportation and separation from their families, but CAP has also negatively impacted entire communities. There have also been allegations of law-enforcement agencies engaging in racial profiling and pretextual arrests in order to get suspected deportable immigrants into the jail so they can be identified by ICE.<sup>9</sup> CAP can also affect a town’s reputation, economy, and school system.<sup>10</sup> Achieving the opposite of its mandate, CAP in fact decreases public safety when immigrant victims and witnesses fear contacting police due to law enforcement’s collaboration with immigration authorities, creating a sphere for criminals to operate with impunity.<sup>11</sup>

This paper provides a brief history and background on the CAP program. It also includes a case study of CAP implementation in Travis County, Texas, which finds that the program has a negative impact on communities because it increases the community’s fear of reporting crime to police, is costly, and may encourage racial profiling.

A Brief History and Explanation of the Criminal Alien Program

CAP is not a new immigration-enforcement scheme, but rather one that has been expanded and amplified in recent years. Since the mid-1980s, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and now the Department of Homeland Security (DHS)<sup>12</sup> have been involved in screening for so-called “criminal aliens” in prisons and jails, with varying levels of success. There have been myriad name and program changes in the agency’s attempts to identify and ultimately remove “criminal aliens” from the United States.

The first incarnation of this program was the Alien Criminal Apprehension Program (ACAP) of 1986, which began as a pilot project in only four cities, and aimed at working with local agencies to begin deportation proceedings even before conviction.<sup>13</sup> This program represented INS’s first attempt to identify non-citizens before conviction and sentencing (prior to ACAP, INS only screened inmates once they were sentenced to prison).<sup>14</sup> The Institutional Hearing Program (IHP), created in 1988, was a similar program targeted at beginning deportation proceedings for inmates in federal and state prisons before completion of their sentences.<sup>15</sup> A decade later, IHP transitioned into the Institutional Removal Program (IRP).<sup>16</sup> Collaboration between local jurisdictions and the federal government continued as part of ICE’s National Criminal Alien Removal Plan, developed after a bill sponsored by Rep. Elton Gallegly (R-CA) passed and was signed into law in 1997.<sup>17</sup> This law required the Attorney General to “establish a program in local jails to identify, prior to arraignment, criminal aliens and aliens who are unlawfully present in the United States.”<sup>18</sup> By 1998, IRP and ACAP had similar functions, with ACAP being responsible for “the identification, processing, prosecution, and removal of all criminal aliens in institutions not participating in the IRP.”<sup>19</sup>

While the names have changed, the goals of these programs remain the same. Ultimately, ACAP and IRP were absorbed into the program’s current manifestation, CAP.<sup>20</sup> The transition to CAP began sometime in Fiscal Year (FY) 2005, but was not under the complete control and supervision of ICE's Office of Detention and Removals (DRO) until June 2007.<sup>21</sup> Data from Travis County, Texas, confirm that ICE increased its presence in local jails soon after the consolidation.<sup>22</sup>

Over the last several years, the federal government has turned to state and local law enforcement agencies to aid federal efforts to enforce immigration law. Today, CAP is one of fourteen federal/local law enforcement programs under the umbrella of ICE ACCESS (Agreements in Cooperation in Communities to Enhance Safety and Security).<sup>23</sup> CAP is one of three "jail status check" programs, the others being the 287(g) jail enforcement program and the Secure Communities initiative.<sup>24</sup> These three programs use different means—technology, agent interviews, or the cross-designation of local police to act as immigration agents—toward the same goal of screening inmates in jails and placing removable non-citizens into deportation proceedings.<sup>25</sup>

The Criminal Alien Program: Step-by-Step

Participation in CAP means state and federal prisons, as well as local jails, share inmate information with ICE and allow ICE agents access to penal facilities in order to interview suspected deportable immigrants. This paper focuses on CAP in local jails rather than its impact on the prison system.<sup>26</sup> The collaborative process may vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, but is essentially the same: local law enforcement provides ICE a list of arrestees, whereupon ICE agents interview those arrestees and place an immigration hold (known as a "detainer") on those who are suspected of being deportable. A detainer lets the jail know that ICE requests custody of an individual once local jurisdiction ends.

The operation of CAP varies among participants, with local law enforcement using a variety of methods for collaborating with ICE. For instance, in Texas, some jurisdictions have ICE agents located in the jails, while others allow telephone or video-conference, rather than in-person interviews with ICE.<sup>27</sup> ICE telephone interviews are an emerging strategy. A survey of all 254 Texas counties shows that 62 percent of the 94 responding counties (both CAP and non-CAP participants) allow ICE to conduct phone interviews at the county jail.<sup>28</sup> Nearly 20 percent of responding counties stated that the use of telephone interviews has increased since 2006.<sup>29</sup> Counties using telephone interviews have been extremely amenable to accommodating ICE: only two Texas counties reported restrictions in the hours that ICE could call, and did so only because they were short-staffed.<sup>30</sup> The degree of access afforded ICE agents also varies by jurisdiction. In some counties, ICE may be given 24/7 access, while other localities limit ICE agents' access to the jail to certain hours or days of the week. Furthermore, the frequency with which local jurisdictions report to ICE may also vary.<sup>31</sup>

The one constant among jurisdictions, however, is the use of detainers. Used as the main tool of "jail status check" programs like CAP and Secure Communities, a detainer is a request from ICE that the arresting agency notify ICE before it releases the suspected non-citizen so that ICE has the opportunity to decide whether the individual should be transferred to ICE custody instead.<sup>32</sup> The detainer power lasts 48 hours, which means that once local charges are complete (either through an adjudication of guilt or the dropping of charges), ICE agents have two days to take custody of the individual. Notably, this time period excludes weekends and holidays, which means the time count runs only on business days.<sup>33</sup> However, ICE does not always assume custody within the allotted time. Inmates sometimes slip through the cracks. There have been incidents in which ICE has neglected to pick up inmates held solely on detainer power, and they languished in jail for three months without recourse.<sup>34</sup> The placement of a detainer also means that an individual may not be released on bond into the community during the pre-trial period, thereby increasing lengths of incarceration and making it harder for arrestees to prepare their criminal defenses.<sup>35</sup>

Existence and Extent of the Criminal Alien Program

Today, CAP is active in all state and federal prisons, as well as more than 300 local jails throughout the country.<sup>36</sup> ICE DRO has a presence in all federal and state prisons, where it screens foreign-born inmates.<sup>37</sup> Not all inmates are screened at every institution, however. ICE only has “100 percent screening” at a number of designated “Tier 1” and “Tier 2” prisons, which reflects the inmate populations that pose the highest risk to public safety and national security, according to an ICE assessment.<sup>38</sup> In contrast to prisons, ICE presence in local jails is weak—only ten percent of local jails have “full coverage” screening.<sup>39</sup> Yet ICE plans to expand its operations in order to have a presence in all U.S. jails and booking locations by 2013.<sup>40</sup>

ICE identifies an increasing number of immigrants in prisons and jails every year. CAP is the program responsible for the largest number of “alien apprehensions,” according to a recent DHS report.<sup>41</sup> In fact, 48 percent of all deportable immigrants identified by ICE in FY 2009 were apprehended through CAP—more than the 287(g) program, Fugitive Operations, and the Office of Field Operations combined.<sup>42</sup> In FY 2006, ICE charged 67,000 “aliens” through the CAP program, a figure that more than doubled the following fiscal year to 164,000.<sup>43</sup> In FY 2008, CAP agents charged 221,000 non-citizens.<sup>44</sup> CAP has been expanding annually, with ICE requesting nearly $200 million for CAP in FY 2010<sup>45</sup>—nearly $50 million more than it had a mere four years prior.<sup>46</sup>

Despite its long history and widespread reach, CAP is not a well-known program and confusion exists—even among counties themselves—as to what participation in CAP entails. For instance, ICE claims that a majority of Texas counties participate in CAP.<sup>47</sup> However, in a survey of all 254 Texas counties, only 16 percent of 94 responding counties claimed to participate in the program, while 84 percent of respondents said that they collaborated with ICE in some way.<sup>48</sup> This shows that counties themselves are unaware of whether or not they are participants in the program.

This lack of information may mean that counties are silently acquiescing to a program they know little about and may be ignorant of the program’s consequences. For instance, one major consequence of local collaboration with ICE is the increased number of detainees placed on inmates, which leads to substantially longer jail times for those inmates.<sup>49</sup> Participation in jail status check programs is voluntary, and localities are not required to actively collaborate with ICE and grant them unfettered access to all arrested persons.<sup>50</sup>

THE IMPACT OF THE CRIMINAL ALIEN PROGRAM

The Case of Travis County, Texas

The Travis County Sheriff’s Office (TCSO) first began a relationship with federal immigration authorities in 1993, when it entered into an intergovernmental service agreement with INS.<sup>51</sup> TCSO signed another agreement with INS in 1999, the purpose of which was to “identify and, where appropriate, deport aliens detained at the Travis County Jail.”<sup>52</sup> The agreement stipulated the use of “enforcement tools,” such as video-conferencing, and use of the INS Law Enforcement Support Center to achieve its objectives.<sup>53</sup>

However, ICE agents began spending more time in the Travis County Jail in late 2007.<sup>54</sup> Travis County Sheriff Greg Hamilton supported this change, announcing in January 2008 that TCSO would be granting ICE permanent office space in the jail.<sup>55</sup> The Sheriff further announced that ICE would be present in the jail 24 hours a day, seven days a week.<sup>56</sup> This announcement resulted in an outcry from many members of the community. Attorneys, civic organizations, and immigrant community groups worried that “increased enforcement could divide families in instances where a parent has U.S.-born children and [would] affect the willingness of undocumented immigrants to work with local law enforcement officials to report and help solve crimes,” for fear of deportation.<sup>57</sup>

These concerns led community members to speak out at several town hall forums, a hearing before the Commissioners’ Court, and public demonstrations.<sup>58</sup> Meanwhile, Sheriff Hamilton claimed there was no new policy in effect, merely a continuation of existing practice.<sup>59</sup> However, the Sheriff neglected to address the issues that sparked the debate: the increasing costs of the program, the negative impact on public safety, and the specter of racial profiling. Faced with growing opposition, TCSO did not create a formal office space for ICE. However, TCSO continues to participate actively in CAP and allows ICE unrestricted access to Travis County Jail.

As part of TCSO participation in CAP, the Sheriff’s Office sends a list of foreign-born inmates to ICE daily.<sup>60</sup> These data are collected as part of the inmate booking process in which all arrestees are asked their place of birth—a question that is self-reported and not verified or vetted by staff.<sup>61</sup> According to the Sheriff, these data are gathered in order to comply with the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations which gives those incarcerated or detained the right to speak with or meet with their consular officials.<sup>62</sup> This appears to be a misinterpretation of the Convention, which was meant to protect foreign nationals facing prosecution in the United States by giving them a right to contact their consulate. Rather, the Sheriff is using the Convention to facilitate the deportation of non-citizens.<sup>63</sup>

ICE agents are granted unfettered access to the jail 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in order to interview inmates to determine legal status. Once the status determination is made, ICE places detainers on individuals it has identified as “removable.” In June 2009, ICE implemented the Secure Communities initiative in the Travis County Jail.<sup>64</sup> This program is a technologically intensive counterpart to the CAP program.<sup>65</sup>

The Unintended Consequences of Detainers

The detainer is an instrument that flags an inmate as a deportable non-citizen, but it is more than a mere administrative tool. Detainers tend to have unforeseen repercussions that negatively impact detained immigrants as well as the community as a whole. One important, yet commonly overlooked, result of detainers is that once an individual is identified as potentially deportable, courts are less likely to release him or her on bail.<sup>66</sup> In Texas, arrested persons who are jailed can return to their communities before trial if they pay a bond to the court—or they may be released on their own recognizance, in which case they do not have to pay any money, but are released on a personal bond. In Travis County, Pre-Trial Services interviews inmates to determine whom it will recommend for a personal bond. However, they will not consider a person with an ICE detainer for this type of bond, which makes it much more difficult to secure release.<sup>67</sup> Similarly, judges rarely grant surety bonds, whereby arrestees must pay money to the court to be released, to inmates with a detainer because it merely results in a transfer to ICE custody—not freedom. In those rare situations in which bail is granted, an individual may not have the resources to pay it.

This lack of pre-trial bail results in longer jail incarceration times and places suspected deportable immigrants at a radical disadvantage in trying to prepare their defense cases for trial.<sup>68</sup> They are held longer than their U.S.-citizen counterparts, making it more difficult to keep their jobs, make money to cover legal expenses, or meet with their attorneys. Despite these consequences, detainers are subject to widespread use. They are placed on anyone in jail who is deportable, regardless of the seriousness of the offense and without regard to innocence or guilt.

Immigrants placed under detainer are transferred to immigration custody once local jurisdiction ends: when charges have been disposed of through a finding of guilt or innocence; charges are dropped; bail is secured; or a convicted individual has served out his or her sentence. In any and all of these situations, once an individual is transferred to ICE custody, he or she is placed into immigration detention while the deportation case is pending. In cases where ICE has an agreement with the jail, the individual may remain in the same physical facility, but custody is transferred from the local authorities to ICE. Deportable immigrants who are placed under detainer—whether they are legal permanent residents or undocumented immigrants—are all immediately transferred to ICE detention from the local jail.

Once in ICE custody, an individual may be eligible for an immigration bond (distinct from a criminal bond) which grants the detainee<sup>69</sup> freedom while his or her immigration case is pending. Posting bond entails filing the appropriate forms and paying a sum of money to ICE, which varies greatly, but may be tens of thousands of dollars.<sup>70</sup> If the individual is ineligible for—or unable to pay—immigration bond, he or she is kept in ICE custody until deportation or the granting of authorized permission to stay in the United States. The detainer process means that rare individuals who are able to secure criminal bond must pay another bond—this time to ICE—before they can be returned to their communities and their lives. For detainees who remain in this second round of incarceration, it is even more difficult to secure legal counsel and prepare their immigration cases.

Problems with Prioritization

DHS purports to focus its “jail status check” programs on immigrants with serious criminal backgrounds. According to DHS, “The [CAP] program ensures the safety of our citizens as well as the national security of the United States by removing dangerous, often recidivist, criminal aliens before they engage in additional criminal activity.”<sup>71</sup> However, data from Travis County show the opposite: CAP targets immigrants with a broad range of criminal histories. Any person arrested in Travis County is booked into jail with his or her personal information collected and shared with ICE. This process occurs regardless of the charge against the arrestee—whether it is a misdemeanor, a traffic offense, or even if the person is a victim of or witness to a crime. For instance, police may arrest victims or witnesses in situations in which the identity of the perpetrator is unclear, such as domestic violence cases in which a victim fights back in self-defense and is arrested.

Furthermore, jail status check programs may incentivize the pre-textual arrests of those who look like immigrants. For instance, in a traffic offense situation, a police officer may decide to arrest a person of Hispanic descent rather than merely issue a citation in order to check immigration status upon booking. A recent study of arrest data in Irving, Texas, confirms this suspicion, finding that local police engaged in racial profiling by arresting Latinos in order to check their immigration status through CAP.<sup>72</sup>

Contrary to public perceptions, CAP does not only identify undocumented immigrants. Recent legislative changes have made legal permanent residents and other legal visa holders who have not yet gained U.S. citizenship deportable for minor violations and misdemeanors.<sup>73</sup> Furthermore, non-citizens may even be deported retroactively for past criminal convictions.<sup>74</sup> In other words, an individual arrested for a current traffic violation may be deported based on a prior crime, even when that act was not a deportable offense at the time committed, and regardless of the individual's rehabilitation or time served. This means that a growing number of legal and undocumented immigrants are identified and deported annually.

Recent statistics from DHS show that a large percentage of immigrants apprehended under CAP are, in fact, not criminals at all. An October 2009 DHS report shows that 57 percent of immigrants identified through the CAP program in FY 2009 had no criminal convictions, up from 53 percent in FY 2008.<sup>75</sup> These data prove that the majority of people swept up under CAP are not serious threats to the safety of our communities. Data from Texas show that a large percentage of those "criminals" placed under detainer are, in fact, low-level offenders.

In Travis County, a majority of immigrants placed under detainer were arrested for a misdemeanor as their most serious charge. In 2008, 58 percent of the detainees were placed on those charged with misdemeanors—up from 38 percent in 2007 and 34 percent in 2006 {Figure 1}.<sup>76</sup>

Data from Irving, Texas (a suburb of Dallas) corroborate the Travis County experience. In the first year of CAP implementation, in 2006-2007, 12.5 percent of all charges were for the traffic offenses of driving without a license or driving with an invalid or suspended license, according to a local newspaper.<sup>77</sup> A recent study by the Warren Institute assessing the arrest data from Irving finds that 98 percent of all arrestees placed under detainer in 2007 had been arrested for misdemeanor offenses.<sup>78</sup>

This paper finds that the absolute number of those arrested for misdemeanors and placed under detainer has increased in Travis County. In Texas, "Class C" misdemeanors are the lowest level misdemeanor, punishable by a maximum $500 fine.<sup>79</sup> In other words, these offenses are not punishable by jail time. While there seemed to be a decreasing trend from 2004 to 2006 in the number of detainees placed on Class C misdemeanants, this changed drastically when ICE began its permanent presence in the jail. By 2008, there were 145 people placed under detainer charged with a Class C misdemeanor as their highest level charge {Figure 2}. However, this analysis undercounts the number of people who are arrested for Class C misdemeanors because it does not take into account people like Sylvia and Ernesto, who are arrested and later charged with higher level “status crimes”—such as carrying false documents. This type of crime is inextricably linked to immigration status, and is a product of being undocumented in the United States.

Community leaders are concerned that CAP sweeps up low-level offenders, as well as individuals with some type of legal status. The Texas Civil Rights Project, for example, has cited concerns for those arrested on minor charges and victims of domestic violence, fearing that “ICE presence will adversely affect abused immigrant women and people with petty charges, such as misdemeanor traffic violations (speeding, not producing a driver’s license, etc.)”<sup>80</sup> Denise Gilman, Clinical Professor at The University of Texas School of Law’s Immigration Clinic, brings the perspective of immigration practice to bear. She has found that a widely cast net means that people with legal status, or those eligible to adjust their status, now face greater hurdles:

Clients have ended up in removal proceeding because they were picked up on very minor charges [by police] and then transferred to ICE custody. Fortunately, those clients have generally been eligible for relief from removal, but that just demonstrates the problem... these are individuals who are eligible and working for their green cards, but any minor brush with the law lands them in a much more adversarial process in immigration court and lands them in detention for some time.<sup>81</sup>

The Rising Number of Detainers in Travis County

The point at which ICE presence in Travis County Jail increased is easily recognizable by the sudden rise in the number of detainers lodged. As of September 2007, there has been a sustained and dramatic rise in detainers, which has serious unintended consequences on the criminal justice system in Travis County. Immigration detainers lead to longer jail stays because inmates are not released on pre-trial bond, leading to increased costs and overcrowded jails.

From the time ICE increased its presence in September 2007 to the end of that year, there were more detainers placed than in the previous eight months of the year. The final four months of 2007 showed a 152 percent increase over the last third of 2006. Compared to the annual total for 2006, 2007 saw a 70 percent increase in the number of detainers. This pattern of growth continued in 2008, resulting in a 119 percent increase in detainers over 2007 {Figure 3}. This percentage translates to 2,062 individuals placed under detainer—the highest number in the eight years of data reviewed {Figure 4}.

The total number of detainers in 2008 surpassed the second highest annual total from 2002 by 750 detainers; this difference represents more than the total number of detainers placed in all of 2006. This trend of increasing detainers is not unique to Travis County.<sup>82</sup> In El Paso County,<sup>83</sup> for example, the number of detainers sextupled in one year from 47 in 2007 to 286 in 2008. In Harris County (Houston),<sup>84</sup> detainers more than tripled from 2006 to 2007, and nearly doubled again in 2008 {Table 1}.<sup>85</sup>

	2006	2007	2008	% Change '06-'08
Travis (Austin)	553	942	2,062	+272.88
Harris (Houston)	1,437	4,963	9,109	+533.89
El Paso	39	47	286	+633.33

The increased number of detainers means that a penal institution faces an increased number of total jail days. Arrestees placed under detainer have substantially longer jail stays than inmates without detainers—not only because they are held for up to 48 hours after local charges have been disposed of, but because ICE-detainer inmates are unlikely to receive bail while awaiting trial. This means that they stay in jail for the duration of the pre-trial period, while similarly situated U.S. citizens would be released on bond.<sup>86</sup> A four-year comparative analysis shows that inmates under detainer have consistently stayed for longer periods than the general population. This holds true across all crime classes in Travis County, with the exception of Class C offenses. From 2004 through 2007, the average lengths of stay for the general population have varied from 22 to 26 days, while the detainer population has consistently been held three times longer—from 65 to 76 days {Figure 5}.

These data are especially worrisome since misdemeanants with detainers stayed, on average, three-and-a-half times longer than non-detainer inmates in 2007. The impact is greater for inmates charged with felonies since felons tend toward longer incarceration times. Even so, detainer inmates stayed nearly twice as long, on average, as non-detainer felons. Inmates charged with a first-degree felony stayed an average of 103 days, while ICE-detainer inmates on the same charge stayed an average of 175 days. As an increasing number of individuals are placed under detainer, an ever-growing number of inmate days are being logged. In 2008, the number of detainers more than doubled from the number of detainers at the beginning of the decade<sup>87</sup>—resulting in a growing number of inmate jail days, which is costly to the county.

The High Cost of Incarcerating Non-Citizens

As more and more people are being detained for longer periods, taxpayers will see more of their crime-fighting resources spent on detaining immigrants. The extensive use of ICE detainers means that inmates are facing longer incarceration stays, each day of which costs the county money. While the federal government reimburses county jails for some of the costs of holding “criminal aliens”—through the Department of Justice’s State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP) and through local contracts with DHS—these payments are insufficient to cover all costs.<sup>88</sup> SCAAP covers correctional officer salary costs only and places restrictions on the types of inmates it will credit.<sup>89</sup> Likewise, the reimbursements from DHS do not cover the full costs of detainers. DHS reimburses only for the amount of time inmates are incarcerated after local charges have been disposed of.<sup>90</sup>

A look at the payments received as compared to the costs of housing ICE detainers may shed some light on the costs. Travis County received a total of $1,257,093 in reimbursements for housing immigrants in FY 2008 (July 1, 2006 to June 30, 2007).<sup>91</sup> In this same period, Travis County spent $2,570,955 housing inmates with detainers. This is based on the total incarceration days for inmates with ICE detainers (42,432) at a per diem cost of $60.59, calculated from incarceration personnel salaries.<sup>92</sup> After subtracting the total costs of incarcerating ICE inmates by the reimbursements received from the federal government, this study finds that the post-reimbursement cost of housing ICE detainer inmates in FY 2008 was $1,313,862 {Table 2}. Travis County is spending more money incarcerating immigrants than it is receiving. This is not because immigrants commit more crime (several studies have shown that they do not), but because the lengths of stay resulting from detainers increase the cost of housing.<sup>93</sup>

Cost of housing	$2,570,955
SCAAP Reimbursements	$ (1,239,273)
Contract Payments	$ (17,820)
Total Cost	$1,313,862

Another problem resulting from the total lengths of stay for ICE detainers, which grows annually as the number of detainers lodged increases, is the problem of overcrowding. While this paper does not assert that ICE detainers are the primary cause of overcrowding, the increase in detention days is one factor that contributes to the pressures on jail housing. When more people are held within an institution than are being released, overcrowding is exacerbated. There are two main causes of overcrowding: increased admissions and increased lengths of stay. The use of detainees dramatically increases the lengths of stay for arrestees. The Pew Center has found that “even the smallest modifications can yield a marked slowdown—or acceleration—in population growth.”<sup>95</sup> This is particularly troubling since the Texas county jail system already faces overcrowding problems.

Travis County suffered perennial crowding from 1993 through 2001 to the extent that the Texas Commission on Jail Standards cited the county for “consistent overcrowding.”<sup>96</sup> Overcrowding remained a problem in 2001, and was also a major concern in 2005.<sup>97</sup> Furthermore, Travis County is not alone in struggling with this problem. In 2005, the Harris County Jail was so overcrowded it had inmates sleeping on the floor,<sup>98</sup> and in 2008 the jail continued to have such extreme overcrowding that it had to contract out the care of nearly 2,000 inmates to Louisiana, yet was still 2,000 inmates over capacity.<sup>99</sup> Bexar County (San Antonio) faced overcrowding problems in 2007.<sup>100</sup> The length of stay of detainees is a significant factor increasing overall inmate days spent in jail. In this way, CAP puts pressure on Texas jails, which have seen systemic overcrowding over the last decade.

Impact on the Immigrant Community

Although ICE and TCSO have reiterated their concern for the immigrant community, the very essence of CAP belies their statements. An ICE spokesperson has said that the agency’s goal is public safety, noting how “[m]any of the victims of criminal aliens are illegal aliens themselves... [o]ne of our highest priorities is to target aliens with criminal convictions who target those in their community.”<sup>101</sup> However, ICE has not addressed issues relating to relations between local police and immigrant communities or the under-reporting of crime by immigrants, and has neglected vulnerable populations such as victims of domestic violence. A major concern is that, by collaborating with ICE, there will be a breakdown of community trust in the police force.<sup>102</sup> When local police and immigration officials are perceived to be acting in tandem, immigrants hesitate to contact police due to fears of deportation. Because a large portion of the immigrant community lives in “mixed-status” families, legal immigrants and even U.S. citizens may be hesitant to collaborate with the police if they fear that an undocumented family member may be detected. This means crime goes unreported. Furthermore, this fear to report crime may lead criminals to specifically target immigrant populations since wrongdoers know they can act with impunity in a community that is too afraid to call for help.

Social service providers and community organizations in Austin have noted a climate change in the immigrant community, where police collaboration with ICE has chilled immigrant relations with police. For instance, Proyecto Defensa Laboral (PDL, Worker’s Defense Project), a non-profit worker center assisting low-wage workers who want to improve their working conditions, has received calls from its members afraid to contact police. After one female member’s thirteen-year-old daughter was sexually assaulted, she waited an entire weekend to report the incident due to fear of ICE’s collaboration with local law enforcement and the ICE presence in the Travis County Jail. Before calling police, the woman contacted PDL to make sure it was safe to do so.<sup>103</sup>

APD, like many other police departments across the country, has recognized the severe public safety consequences of local enforcement programs. Police Chief Art Acevedo puts forth this scenario when discussing the unintended consequences of such programs: “If your child was kidnapped...and the only witness is...an illegal immigrant, and they’re afraid to come forward, do you want to create that environment where your child is not rescued by law enforcement because we're not getting full cooperation from the community?"<sup>104</sup>

Community advocates have been particularly concerned for immigrant victims of domestic violence. Domestic violence is of no small concern for Texas, where the Texas Council on Family Violence (TCFV) reports there were 189,401 documented incidents of family violence in 2007.<sup>105</sup> However, this does not account for abuse that goes unreported by immigrants. For undocumented immigrants, the incidence of domestic violence is acute. Immigrants tend to face cultural and language difficulties as well as inconsistent perceptions of how the criminal justice system operates.<sup>106</sup> Scholars have found that immigrant women face many hurdles in contacting police about their abusers—hurdles aggravated by police participation in local immigration-enforcement initiatives.<sup>107</sup> TCFV has held internal meetings on CAP, because they believe local enforcement is an issue that seriously affects the immigrant community, specifically victims of domestic violence.<sup>108</sup>

Neither TCSO nor APD has a policy of affirmatively asking individuals about their immigration status.<sup>109</sup> While this is an important step towards reducing fear in the immigrant community, it may not be sufficient to counter the fear created by working with ICE. Although APD has no agreement with ICE (unlike TCSO), all persons arrested in Austin pass through the Travis County Jail, where they may be identified and removed through the CAP program. This makes it difficult for APD to allay the community's fears.

Another concern is that victims and witnesses are sometimes arrested due to misunderstandings. For instance, if an officer cannot understand a Spanish speaker, he may not be able to tell the victim from the abuser—especially if the victim's self-defense wounds are visible on the perpetrator—and will arrest both parties.<sup>110</sup> The Austin Immigrant Rights Coalition has documented several such incidents. In one case, a divorced couple had an argument and the woman called the police. Upon seeing scratch marks on the man's neck, the authorities arrested her. As a result, she was placed under detainer and then transferred to ICE custody. Because she was in detention, she missed a family court date.<sup>111</sup>

Although TCSO has recognized the specific situation of immigrant victims of domestic violence, they have not sufficiently remedied the problem. One TCSO detective noted that "[w]hen a woman is afraid of deportation, usually that is something that the batterer has used to keep her in line or to try to keep her from calling law enforcement."<sup>112</sup> Despite this recognition of the difficulty in getting immigrant women to come forward, there is no specific policy within TCSO to ensure that these women are not turned over to ICE. As the Texas Civil Rights Project has noted, "across the state...ICE agents do not pay attention to [the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA)] and routinely hold for deportation abused undocumented women, who actually qualify for VAWA protection, rather than releasing and referring them to organizations that could help them regularize their status."<sup>113</sup> TCSO continues participation in CAP, which only worsens immigrants' fear of coming forward.

The Criminal Alien Program has not fulfilled its mission of enhancing public safety. Instead, it corrodes the trust between immigrant communities and local law enforcement, allowing spheres of criminality to exist in immigrant neighborhoods where crime goes unreported because of individuals' fear of deportation. CAP does not limit its focus to violent criminals. Rather, the majority of "criminals" identified through the program are people who were arrested for mere misdemeanor violations. Despite the fact that undocumented immigration is a civil violation, immigrants are being treated (and branded) as criminals, with deportation as their punishment. CAP does not distinguish between the innocent and the guilty, between those who are traffic violators and those who are violent felons, or between victims and aggressors.

Data from Travis County Jail show that, increasingly, people are being placed under detainer, and that these inmates are held for longer periods than inmates in the general population. These longer stays affect the community in many ways, both fiscally and socially. The inability of detainer inmates to secure pre-trial bail means that these inmates are being held three times as long, on average, than non-detainer inmates. The costs of housing inmates under CAP have increased significantly, despite federal reimbursement. Furthermore, the increased number of detainer days is a contributing factor to overcrowding, which is a constant concern for Texas jails.

The number of people who are placed under detainer has skyrocketed in cities across Texas. This has adverse effects on the immigrant community, which begins to identify any interactions with police as culminating in deportation. As increasing numbers of immigrants come in contact with ICE after minor brushes with police, this perception hardens into reality. Both documented and undocumented immigrants stop contacting police to report crime because they are worried about the consequences of inviting police into their mixed-status homes and communities. This problem does not only affect immigrants, but the community at large. As the Austin Police Chief has stated, everyone is at risk when a portion of the community is too afraid to cooperate with law enforcement.

RECOMMENDATIONS

- Jail status screenings should take place upon conviction, not during the pre-conviction stage.
- ICE must make every effort to prioritize those immigrants who have been convicted of egregious felony offenses, rather than low-level offenders who pose no threat to public safety.
- DHS should clarify that an immigration detainer is not the equivalent of a criminal arrest warrant or criminal detainer, but is simply a non-mandatory request that police maintain custody of an individual for a maximum of 48 hours to facilitate DHS's status investigation. DHS should clarify that the local jail is not authorized to detain the subject for a period exceeding 48 hours, excluding weekends and holidays.
- ICE should be required to issue reports to Congress on a regular basis, with statistics on the crimes for which identified non-citizens are arrested, the disposition of each underlying criminal case, and the nationality and ethnicity of identified non-citizens. Jurisdictions participating in CAP should be required to report their arrest and identification statistics to ICE supervisors for oversight and management purposes.
- The U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO) or another neutral agency should conduct an audit of CAP. The report should contain an assessment of CAP's goals and objectives, performance measures, supervision and oversight, data tracking, and reporting mechanisms. It is important that officials overseeing CAP review the GAO report on 287(g) and make every reasonable effort to ensure that this national program be properly defined, documented, evaluated, and supervised.
- All jurisdictions participating in CAP should receive training on civil rights and illegal racial or ethnic profiling.
- DHS must create and implement a strong complaint and redress mechanism for individuals who believe they have been wrongly arrested, detained, or otherwise mistreated under CAP.
- Local jurisdictions participating in CAP should engage in community-oriented policing strategies in order to regain immigrant trust. Local law enforcement should hire Spanish-speaking staff, and conduct outreach to immigrant communities on issues such as domestic violence and labor law violations.

This study covers an eight-year period, from 2001 through 2008, and studies over 300,000 inmate booking arrest records.<sup>114</sup> The study compares data for those who were placed under detainer and those who were not. Inmates booked into the county jail may be charged with multiple offenses. This study analyzes the data based on the individuals arrested rather than the individual charges because it is concerned with the effect on individuals. For example, if individual charges were assessed, there would be many more charges than actual detainees placed, and it would not be possible to determine accurately the breakdown by offense type. This study's classification of criminal offense level is based on the highest charge each arrestee was charged with, according to the Texas Penal Code, which defines misdemeanors and felonies, and the sub-categories of each.<sup>115</sup> This study has not included the length of stay for inmates who were not released as of April 2009, which skews the data slightly, making it appear as though the average length of stay is lower than it is. Those who are still incarcerated (up to or over a year, in some cases) would increase the average length of stay.

<sup>25</sup> The 287(g) program is a partnership between DHS and local law enforcement agencies in which local law enforcement officers are deputized to enforce federal immigration laws. In the detention, or jail, model, deputized officers are located in jails/correctional facilities to perform immigration enforcement functions after individuals are detained by police. The Secure Communities program is another partnership between DHS and local jails. Upon booking, the fingerprints of everyone detained in a participating jail are checked against immigration databases, and DHS takes enforcement action against immigrants they identify as removable.

<sup>26</sup> In Texas, “jail” refers to a local penal institution where persons arrested and awaiting trial are held, as well as persons convicted of a misdemeanor with a maximum sentence of two years. “Prisons” house felons, who have been sentenced to incarceration for a period of two years to life, in addition to housing inmates sentenced to death. The institution must have incarcerated a criminal alien for "at least 4 consecutive days during the reporting period." A "criminal alien" is defined, for the purposes of SCAAP, as a person in the country illegally, who has been convicted of a felony or two or more misdemeanors. The costs for inmates who do not meet these requirements are not reimbursed. SCAAP reimburses both the pre-trial and post-conviction incarceration costs for inmates that are eligible for payment. Inmates who can be corroborated as undocumented in an ICE database are covered at 100 percent, while those whose status is indeterminate are reimbursed at only 80 percent of the cost. For these reasons, SCAAP does not reimburse the full cost of incarceration.

The Cost of Responding to Immigration Detainers in California

PRELIMINARY FINDINGS

August 22, 2012

Introduction

Los Angeles County began its participation in the Secure Communities deportation program on August 27, 2009, making it one of the first jurisdictions in America where the program, also known as S-Comm, was activated. Like the program itself, LA County's participation started with little fanfare but has since been riddled with controversy. As S-Comm deployment has been expanded throughout California, it has come under fire for its failure to achieve stated priorities, its damaging effect on community policing, and its role in multiple civil rights violations including racial profiling of Latinos, the criminalization of immigrants, and the illegal detention of U.S. Citizens by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE).

While S-Comm has become a proxy flashpoint for the broader debate about immigration reform, all sides agree that the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) has been overly secretive about every aspect of the program. Indeed, DHS's own internal reviews have acknowledged the agency's fault in creating confusion about the program.

As more data and details about S-Comm have become available, many local jurisdictions have sought to mitigate its harms. Some states like New York, Illinois, and Massachusetts tried to leave the program entirely, but they were forced to participate by DHS. Recently, multiple local jurisdictions, including Cook County, Illinois and Washington, DC, have passed legislation to limit local compliance with immigration detainers. Immigration detainers are the mechanism through which S-Comm seeks to detain immigrants in local jails in order to facilitate transfer ICE for deportation proceedings. California is considering legislation known as the TRUST Act (AB 1081) to ensure that immigrants who pose no threat to public safety are not incarcerated at local taxpayer expense.

This report attempts to shed light on one issue: the fiscal cost borne on local jurisdictions by S-Comm. Data released by the Los Angeles County Sheriff Office – only after it was compelled to provide it through litigation<sup>1</sup> – show an enormous potential cost savings to the county and to the state if detention of immigrants would be limited. More data is required to ascertain the full fiscal impact of S-Comm. But, as this report makes clear, S-Comm is an expensive burden that Los Angeles, and California, can ill afford:

- Los Angeles County taxpayers spend over $26 million per year to detain immigrants for ICE.
- Individuals in Los Angeles County custody who are subject to immigration detainers spend, on average, 20.6 extra days in county custody.
- California taxpayers spend an estimated $65 million annually to detain immigrants for ICE.

The Number of People Released to ICE

According to data records compiled by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, 5,184 people who were booked into the jail system during the first three months of 2011 were handed over to ICE, the deportation enforcement arm of the Department of Homeland Security.<sup>2</sup> Using these figures, it is possible to estimate that over a year's time, 20,736 County Jail prisoners will be released into ICE custody.

Additional Days in Detention

The average length of stay for people who were released from the Los Angeles County Jail to ICE custody was 32.3 days, while the average length of stay for all other individuals released was just 11.7 days. This prolonged detention of 20.6 days should not be surprising, since other studies have found similar patterns.<sup>3</sup>

The primary cause of the additional time in custody is the immigration detainer, also known as an "ICE hold." Immigration detainers are issued by ICE for suspected noncitizens. The term "detainer" may be misleading. In the criminal justice context, a detainer is generally issued by a law enforcement agency after pending charges have been approved by a judge.

In the immigration context, a detainer is not a warrant issued or approved by a judge. It is simply a non-binding request, issued by an administrative ICE officer, which requests that jail personnel hold an individual for an additional 48 hours, excluding weekends and holidays, after they would otherwise be released, in order to give ICE extra time to take them into federal custody.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The data used in this analysis were obtained from the Los Angeles Sheriffs Department by the National Day Labor Organizing Network, the National Immigration Law Center, and the Coalition for Humane Immigrant Rights of Los Angeles through a public records request. Of 115,330 individuals booked into the jail system during the first quarter of 2011, release dates were not provided for a relative handful (440). Those cases with missing release dates were excluded from the analysis.

An ICE detainer can affect length of stay in two ways. First, once a detainer is lodged, both court and jail officials may consider the person to be ineligible for pretrial release, even if they are charged with a low-level non-violent charge and have well-established ties to their home communities. For example, it appears to be the practice of the Los Angeles County Sheriffs' Department to refuse to release on bail any individual who is subject to an ICE detainer.<sup>5</sup> Second, while ICE detainers expire after 48 hours, many jailers will hold detainees for days or weeks longer until an ICE agent arrives to take custody.<sup>6</sup>

Estimating the Cost of Additional Detention for Los Angeles County Taxpayers

The additional 20.6 days spent in custody by people before they are released to ICE places a huge and largely unnecessary burden on taxpayers. The current cost per prisoner in the Los Angeles County Jail is reported to be $113 per day. Using that figure, the added cost of holding people for ICE would be more than $48 million annually.

But that figure could be larger than the actual cost, because such figures are typically derived by simply dividing the total jail budget by the number of people held in custody. Without detailed information about the marginal costs incurred (or saved) when more (or fewer) people are confined, it is not possible to accurately estimate a true per diem cost. Yet a more conservative – and likely more realistic – per diem cost is available when jails are filled to capacity and jailers are considering “out-sourcing” custody of their prisoners to other jurisdictions.

Under California's “realignment” policy, designed to reduce prison overcrowding, thousands of people who would previously have been incarcerated in California state prisons have been shifted to county-level correctional systems. California's county jails are sorely stretched for space to house the volume of people who are now committed to local confinement in their jurisdictions. During the first quarter 2012, almost 13,000 people were released from the jails every month due to lack of space.<sup>7</sup>

In July, senior staff at the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department were engaged in discussions with officials in several Central Valley communities about housing people classified as “low-level” in their jails. It is estimated that contracting with detention facilities in Kern County for custody of Los Angeles County prisoners will cost $61 per day for each person transferred.<sup>8</sup> Using that figure, it can be conservatively estimated that the additional days that people with ICE detainees are held in the Los Angeles County Jail system before release could incur more than $26,041,000 in added costs over a year’s time.

A State-wide Estimate

Statistical records compiled by California’s Corrections Standards Authority indicate that 1,096,899 people were booked into the state’s county jails in 2011.<sup>9</sup> Assuming that the data patterns we see in Los Angeles are roughly applicable state wide, 51,833 of them would have been held for more than 20 additional days before being released to ICE custody, at an added cost to taxpayers of more than $65 million.

Conclusion

Los Angeles County and the State of California are spending tremendous amounts of tax-payer dollars to detain immigrants for civil immigration violations. A conservative estimate places this cost at $26 million annually for Los Angeles County alone. The cost to California taxpayers of holding people for ICE is estimated to be more than $65 million.

New York City Enforcement of Immigration Detainers PRELIMINARY FINDINGS

By Aarti Shahani, Justice Strategies

October 2010

Executive Summary

Justice Strategies is conducting research for a forthcoming report on the combined impact of drug laws and immigration enforcement on jailers, prisoners and taxpayers. The following preliminary findings relate to New York City.

The New York City Department of Corrections provided Justice Strategies with a database of all discharges in 2008. We analyzed the dataset of noncitizen prisoners whose top charge is a drug-related offense;<sup>1</sup> and interviewed dozens of corrections officials, former prisoners, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and immigration attorneys. The Department of Homeland Security did not respond to written and telephonic requests for an interview.

Analyzing noncitizens whose top charge is a drug-related offense, Justice Strategies found that:

- While Homeland Security purports to target the most dangerous offenders, there appears to be no correlation between offense level and identification for deportation.
- In New York City, Homeland Security detainers are enforced in such a fashion as to effectively terminate the bail rights of certain pre-trial noncitizen prisoners.
- Controlling for race and offense level, noncitizens with an ICE detainer spend 73 days longer in jail before being discharged, on average, than those without an ICE detainer.

Following is a detailed explanation.

Preliminary Findings

The immigration detainer is a non-binding hold request, issued by an administrative officer rather than a judge.

An immigration detainer is a hold issued on a suspected noncitizen by the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), the interior deportation police of Homeland Security. The term “detainer” may be misleading. In the criminal context, a detainer is issued by a law enforcement agency after pending charges have been approved by a judge. In the immigration context, a detainer it is not a warrant issued or approved by a judge. It is a non-binding request, issued by an administrative ICE officer.<sup>2</sup> It was legislated for the first and only time in 1996, to apply to noncitizens charged with drug offenses [See Appendix A].

In a 2006 report co-authored by New York City Police Chief Raymond Kelly, the Major Cities Chiefs write: “civil detainers do not fall within the clear criminal enforcement authority of local police agencies and in fact lay[] a trap for unwary officers who believe them to be valid criminal warrants or detainers.”<sup>3</sup> The police chiefs posit that the entry of civil immigration detainers in N.C.I.C. – the database for outstanding criminal warrants – has jeopardized “the integrity of the system has a notice system for criminal warrants.”<sup>4</sup>

While the New York City Police Department does not apprehend individuals solely on the basis of an immigration detainer, the Department of Corrections enforces the detainer similarly to a criminal warrant. This practice has evolved organically. New York City has not yet issued a policy on the local enforcement of federal immigration detainers.

There is no correlation between ICE detainer issuance and severity of top charge.

Among the 1215 noncitizens whose top charge is a drug crime, 552 (45%) received ICE detainers. The issuance of an ICE detainer is not associated with the severity of the top charge. While 34 percent of those noncitizens charged with an A1 felony (most serious) received an ICE detainer, over half of those with an A misdemeanor received an ICE detainer. Although more non-citizens detained in DOC had a B non-violent felony top charge than an A misdemeanor, ICE issued an equal number of immigration detainers to each group.

Distribution of Immigration Detainers
Charge Type	Charge Level	Total non-USC	% non-USC	Non-USC with ICE detainer #	Non-USC with ICE detainer %	% of total ICE detainers
Violation	1	5	0.4	2	40.0	0.4
B misdemeanor	2	71	5.8	28	39.4	5.1
A misdemeanor	3	312	25.7	159	51.0	28.8
E non-violent felony	4	24	2.0	8	33.3	1.5

A1 felony	12	90	7.4	31	34.4	5.6
	Total	1215	100.0	552	45.4	100.0

ICE representatives assert that they prioritize apprehension of the most serious offenders. These trends contradict that claim.<sup>5</sup> It may be that ICE agents issue detainers against those charged with A1 drug felonies at a rate far below the average because they assume that these defendants can be apprehended down the line, during a prison sentence. But the above average rate of detainers on A2 drug felonies, with defendants also likely to receive a prison term, weakens that explanation.

It may be that noncitizens were released on bail before ICE could identify them. This is unlikely. ICE issued half of all immigration detainers within one day of admission, and 90 percent within one week. Of the noncitizens with an A1 top charge, only 20 percent were discharged from jail within one week of admission; as compared to 46 percent of those with an A misdemeanor top charge.

Over half of ICE detainers are issued within one day, indicating that the screening process is not investigative.

The speed with which ICE detainers are issued suggests another explanation: the detainer is neither related to risk level nor the product of investigation. ICE may prioritize those people with already well-developed case files, as they are easiest to deport. It is unclear to what extent ICE relies on its own databases or those of DOC to obtain the information needed to issue a detainer so speedily.

While going for the low hanging fruit is not consistent with ICE’s stated priorities, it may be that these priorities are not institutionalized. This pattern indicates that law enforcement officers are incentivized to work for maximum numbers, not risk levels of those charged with drug offenses.

Days to Immigration Detainer
Days	Freq.	%	Cum %

Controlling for race and offense level, noncitizens with a drug-related top charge and an ICE detainer spend 73 days longer in jail before being discharged, on average, than those without an ICE detainer.

The issuance of an immigration detainer is strongly associated with prolonged jail stay. The citizen and noncitizen population without an immigration detainer spend, on average, the same amount of time in city jails before being discharged. But noncitizens charged with drug crimes and with an ICE detainer spend 73 days longer in jail before being discharged, on average, than those without an ICE detainer. These figures control for race and offense level. They include the detention of prisoners who are pre-trial (charged with, but not convicted of, an offense), as well as those convicted of misdemeanors and other low-level offenses. They also include undocumented immigrants, as well as lawful permanent residents and those with valid claims to remain here.

Noncitizens with an ICE detainer are effectively barred from pre-trial release on bail, no matter the offense level.

Arizona was America’s first state to pass a law summarily denying bail to immigrants facing criminal charges.<sup>6</sup> While New York has no such de jure prohibition on bail for non-citizens, the immigration detainer acts as a de facto one. Noncitizens otherwise eligible for bail do not post it. They must negotiate a plea bargain while in DOC custody.<sup>7</sup>

Half of noncitizens with a drug-related top charge and without an ICE detainer are discharged from DOC through bail or [un]supervised release. Only 2 percent of those with an ICE detainer are discharged pre-trial. Over half are discharged into ICE custody, and a quarter into state prison to serve a criminal sentence first. They will presumably be deported upon completion of it, through the New York State Institutional Removal Program<sup>8</sup> and/or subsequent transfer into ICE custody.

Of those noncitizens receiving an immigration detainer, 7 were released on bail. It is unclear whether these individuals were transferred directly into ICE custody, or were released pursuant to completion of their criminal case. It is likely that another set of noncitizens with immigration detainers who paid $1 bail are counted in the data as discharges to ICE.

<sup>1</sup> We categorized each entry as a noncitizen if the prisoner has an immigration warrant, and/or is released into ICE custody, and/or self-reports as a noncitizen. While there is incentive to lie about being a citizen, there is no incentive to lie about being a noncitizen.

<sup>2</sup> ICE issues two types of internal administrative hold: the “arrest warrant” (Form I-200, Warrant of Arrest) and the “detainer” (Form I-247, Immigration Detainer – Notice of Action).

Appendix A: Immigration Detainer Statute

8 USC 1357 (d)

(d) Detainer of aliens for violation of controlled substances laws

In the case of an alien who is arrested by a Federal, State, or local law enforcement official for a violation of any law relating to controlled substances, if the official (or another official)

(1) has reason to believe that the alien may not have been lawfully admitted to the United States or otherwise is not lawfully present in the United States,

(2) expeditiously informs an appropriate officer or employee of the Service authorized and designated by the Attorney General of the arrest and of facts concerning the status of the alien, and

(3) requests the Service to determine promptly whether or not to issue a detainer to detain the alien, the officer or employee of the Service shall promptly determine whether or not to issue such a detainer. If such a detainer is issued and the alien is not otherwise detained by Federal, State, or local officials, the Attorney General shall effectively and expeditiously take custody of the alien.
